

Chancellor Bruenig In Sharp Attack On Opposition In Reichstag

PEECH GIVEN DURING UPROAR AMONG MEMBERS

Chancellor Throws Aside Reserve to Forcefully Uphold President

Chancellor Bruenig, who has been striking back at the opposition in the Reichstag today with impassioned speech delivered in the most tumultuous sessions of the German chancellor ever confronted.

Throwing aside his habitual reserve, gesticulating, pounding his fist, the chancellor spoke in a voice charged with emotion, charging his opponents with creating dissension at a time when Germany is in the midst of the most serious foreign negotiations.

Never will I carry on a foreign policy of pure prestige," he shouted to the din, "merely to satisfy the demands of political agitators at home, thereby endangering the vital interests of the nation.

This policy of ours would command a different kind of attention and if the German people could read at this critical time to forego idealistic illusions at home."

He then declared that he was not a man who hesitates to take the most difficult decisions at the most difficult times.

Referring to charges that he had abandoned American sympathies, Dr. Bruenig asserted that "The American government was consulted at every step in the reparations discussions."

At the Geneva disarmament conference the German delegation received the preliminary convention as a framework, he said, for the conflict in the far east, many are anxious to help restore peace, but her position is different from that of most of the powers in that she has no extraterritorial interests in China.

Closest to the glowing tribute President von Hindenburg: "In these difficult times I was to renew my hope again and in it was because I was prevented to serve a man like him. Any who ever has had the good fortune to serve this man will understand why I am making every effort to see that he continues to be Germany's destiny."

There were no applause from the government benches.

Washington—(P)—Dr. Richard Kuhlmann, who was Germany's foreign secretary the last year of the great war and surrendered his office because of his objections to settlement of the war by negotiation, than by fighting, he said, President Hindenburg will win in the approaching German election.

There are only two candidates in the Reichstag, President Hindenburg and Adolf Hitler," said Dr. Kuhlmann, in an interview to "And of course the opposition general Hindenburg is due to his defeat to dismiss Chancellor Bruenig."

Hindenburg advanced Colonel Hugenberg as a candidate because of his loyalty to the emperor, who stood by Hindenburg and Hitler was forced into a race.

Little Strength Colonel Duesterberg, vice president of the Steel Helms, is a candidate with little strength. He is an officer without training in the army and probably will not make much of a showing. Thalmann, the Communist candidate, will automatically get the Communist vote.

The real battle is between President Hindenburg and Hitler. I believe Hindenburg will win, but it will be an exciting election and may very close.

Chancellor Bruenig is an able and among the most active German statesmen. He has been successful in the way the president has supported him wins general approval. Kuhlmann is a cultivated man who kept his head through all the ups and downs made on him and conducted himself admirably.

He flies attacks which Joseph Goebbels, lieutenant of Hitler, has upon Bruenig and the president in the Reichstag do not have approval of Hitler in my opinion. Followers have got out of hand. I don't think any politician can win an election in Germany by calling for a government of leaders plus liars."

Von Kuhlmann came to Washington to pay his respects to President Hoover and Secretary Stimson, whom he had appointments this noon. He was attached to the German embassy here in 1906, when the Speck von Sternberg was German ambassador. He will be the last of the German ambassador here tonight.

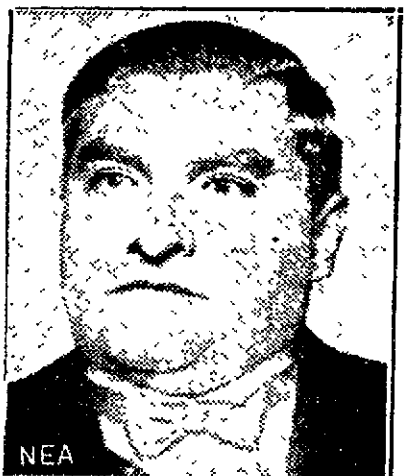

NT EARLY RULING IN REDISTRICTING FIGHT Washington—(P)—A determined effort is to be made to bring from the supreme court at its present session a ruling which will be controlling in determining reapportionment in New York, Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri.

Each state there is a question whether joint action by the governor and the legislature necessary to a reapportionment legal or whether the legislature can act alone.

With general elections to be held in November and with state parties to be held this spring from Minnesota where a reapportionment act vetoed by Governor Johnson was held valid by the state supreme court—have joined in urging the court to fix date for hearing the matter in March.

It would enable a decision before the end of the present term, which is expected, would be broad enough to cover questions raised in reapportionment disputes.

Mrs. Judd To Be Hanged On May Eleventh

Murderess Not Likely to Die on Gallows on Date Set by Judge, However

Arizona State Prison, Florence, Ariz.—(P)—Sentence to hang May 11, Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted "lunatic" murderess, today occupied a cell in condemned row, hopeful her attorneys may yet save her from the gallows.

Mrs. Judd was brought to the state prison from Phoenix late last night, having left Phoenix a few hours after Superior Judge Howard C. Spaulding denied her a new trial and sentenced her to death.

Although the execution date was set for May 11, state authorities said it was not likely she would be hanged for at least 15 months.

Under Arizona law, an appeal to the state supreme court is mandatory in all cases where the death penalty is set. If the defense does not make an appeal, the state must ask for a review of the evidence. Because this appeal must be made the execution cannot take place for more than a year.

Sheriff J. R. McFadden, who accompanied Mrs. Judd to the prison from Phoenix, said the convicted woman was in "very jovial spirits" on the trip, singing several Spanish songs. Mrs. Judd learned Spanish while living in Mexico several years ago.

McFadden said he questioned Mrs. Judd during the automobile trip about details of the killing of Mrs. Agnes Anne Le Roi and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, but that she declined to answer most of his questions.

In answer to the query, "did you have an accomplice?" the sheriff said Mrs. Judd replied: "yes, I had an accomplice." She refused, however, to name her purported accomplice. In court yesterday when she was sentenced, Mrs. Judd denied authorship of a letter to her husband, Dr. William C. Judd, in which an alleged accomplice was named.

When she was placed in her cell, Mrs. Judd shivered and remarked, "I visited a lot of dark caves when I lived in Mexico and wasn't afraid, but this dark place scares me to death."

The condemned row is lighted by three dim bulbs. It has been occupied by only one other woman in the history of the state, Eva Dugan, who was hanged here in 1930 for the murder of a reclusive near Tucson.

Mrs. Judd will be prisoner number 3311.

WASHINGTON HAD CONFIDENCE IN FUTURE OF U. S.

But He Was Chronic Complainer of Minor Things, Kiwanians Are Told

Both pessimist and optimist, George Washington had complete confidence in the future of his country, and the work of his officers, but was a chronic complainer about provisions, supplies, etc., during the Revolution Louis P. Peeke of Fond du Lac said in a Washington bicentennial address at the Kiwanis club at Conway hotel Tuesday noon.

Washington rebelled on Providence and was optimistic about the outcome of many important things, but when it came to small details he was most often pessimistic and complaining.

Describing Washington, with his 210 pounds, his abnormally large hands, big nose and pock-marked face, Mr. Peeke spoke of his heritage, training, marriage war record, and presidential career. The first child by the second marriage of his father, Washington was the fourth generation of Washingtons in this country. His father's death when Washington was 11 prohibited him from studying in England as his two brothers had done. At the age of 17 he received a surveyor's certificate.

He fell in love with another man's wife, Sally Fairfax, but exercised such control over the situation that he never brought disaster upon her or himself. Later he fell in love with and married Martha Custis, a widow, and brought up her children.

In Indian War He spoke of Washingtons work as a colonel in the French and Indian war, his appearance in uniform at the Second Continental Congress, his appointment as commander-in-chief and his victories and defeats in the Revolutionary war.

The siege of Boston, defeat at Long Island, retreat across New Jersey crossing the Delaware, success at Princeton, the winter at Valley Forge, the battles of Brandywine, Germantown, Saratoga, and Monmouth, where he met Lee. On a fencible at Monmouth Mr. Peeke said, the event is marked with the sentence, "Here Washington met Lee and reprimanded him severely." As a matter of fact, said the speaker, it was more than a reprimand for Washington is said to have "cussed" Lee for 20 minutes straight without crossing his trail once.

Of the 46 years he lived at Mount Vernon 23 were spent in the service of the country, he stated. Despite the fact that there were many more learned men at the Constitutional convention, Washington was chosen as the president of his country. The speaker touched on his eight presidential years, how he succeeded to a cold, and how three years later Martha Custis died.

He talked about his policy of making military affairs subservient to civil affairs, of his great command of the English language, of his hospitality, his lodge memberships, his position on two Episcopal vestry boards and his faith in God and his friends.

Much Trout Spawn Sent To Out-Of-State Hatcheries

BY BERT CLAFLIN

And now Haskell Noyes, chairman of the Wisconsin conservation commission, in a speech at Appleton recently, condemned winter ice fishing. He says it is poor conservation and should be discontinued. We have preached against that baneful practice for a long time. It is without any doubt the most detrimental thing that can be done to reduce the supply of game fishes in Wisconsin waters.

Let us hope that Mr. Noyes also exercises his power in some way to make impossible the shipping of brook trout eggs out of the state, inasmuch as they are so badly needed right here at home. As I mentioned in a recent article, 300,000 Brown trout eggs were shipped a short time ago to British Columbia for restocking purposes. Imagine that. And I say, without fear of contradiction by anyone who actually follows the game and knows the true situation in Wisconsin, that our trout are woefully scarce, so scarce, in fact, as to make it almost impossible to catch any more of them.

They say that a man operating a private trout hatchery cannot be prevented from selling his product whenever he chooses. That is a moot question. Anyhow, he would just as soon, and no doubt sooner, sell them here at home if he had a buyer. It is up to the state to see that he has a buyer.

I believe if the state, and that means the conservation commission, would concentrate its efforts in certain regions until conditions were on the upgrade, rather than attempting to accomplish just a bit here and there all over the big waterways of the state, that our fish could be restored.

Let us take the case of Marinette for instance. There are no more ideal trout waters in the whole state than are to be found here. Why not a couple of trout hatcheries, on say, the Thunder and the Beaver? And then use the trout hatched therein first to stock the streams of that county. It would not be long until those wonderful streams would again fairly teem with legal trout. After that, the product could be spread about wherever needed.

And then, a pike and musky hatchery, on the Menominee and Ontonagon rivers. Someone will say there are already such hatcheries in those counties. I know there are, but how are they operated? One should then be installed in Sawyer-co, in Iron, in Douglas, in fact in every county that needs it, but, to be successful, the fry should first be used to rehabilitate the immediate waters.

Such a course may sound a bit too commercial to some. But anything so valuable as our wild life, particularly the fish, should be put on a commercial basis, as it is handled in Europe. Conservation in Wisconsin will never be successful until it is treated. If outside tourists will come here every year and spend from a hundred million to a hundred and fifty million dollars it is an asset well worth proper consideration.

ARREST WRESTLER FOR ASSAULTING REFEREE Boston—(P)—Jack Washburn, Los Angeles wrestler, was held in $10,000 bail today on charges of assault and battery on Referee Bert Potts of Philadelphia, whom he tossed out of the Boston Garden ring during a bout last night. Washburn's arrest was made on complaint of Dick Dunn, general manager of the Boston garden.

Potts was taken to a hospital suffering from a fractured skull. His condition was critical. Washburn and Jack Smith of Chicago were grappling in a semi-final contest.

WARN AMERICANS TO LEAVE HOTEL

Point Out Hostelry Is in Line of Fire in Far East

Shanghai—(P)—All Americans who reside at the Astor House hotel one of the landmarks of Shanghai facing Soochow creek, were cautioned today by American officials to leave there and retire to a safer location but most of them had declined to move up to late today.

The women and children of employees at the German consulate, which is within a stone's throw from the flagship already have been evacuated.

Earlier today American officials announced they would soon make public a plan for a general evacuation of the city by American residents in case this became necessary. The plan, they said, would include the naming of centers where the Americans would be called upon to gather in case an emergency were declared so they could be picked up easily.

NEW STATE IN MANCHURIA TO BE REPUBLIC

Former Boy Emperor to Be Chief Executive of "Manchoukuo"

Mukden, Manchuria—(P)—The new Manchurian Federated state will be nominally a republic and Henry Pu-Yi, former "boy emperor" of China will be its "provisional chief executive," the executive committee of the new state announced today.

The young Mr. Pu-Yi had previously insisted that the state be set up as a monarchy and that he be given at least some vestige of the splendours of his ancestors, the former Manchu emperors of China.

The executive committee added, however, in its outline of the new state constitution, that the name of the country and the title of its head would be carefully chosen to leave the way open for the establishment of a monarchy in the future if that seemed best.

Following the model of the Nanking Chinese constitution the Manchurian document provides for three councils, known as a legislative yuan, a national affairs yuan and an inspection yuan. The cabinet, consisting of a premier and seven ministers, is placed under the national affairs yuan.

There was no provision in the constitution for participation by the people in the government except a provision that the chief executive should be nominated by and be responsible to the citizens.

The choice of Changchun to be the capital of the new state brought gloom to business circles in Mukden and corresponding enthusiasm at Changchun.

The new state is to be called "Manchoukuo" which translated is "land of Manchuria" and might be applied either to a republic or a monarchy. The flag will have a yellow body with red, white, blue, and black parallel stripes on the upper quarter nearest the staff.

ST. LOUIS WIDOW SENDS LEAP YEAR NOTE TO SCHNEIDER

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau) Washington—As "one of the bachelors that Congress boasts about," Representative George J. Schneider of Appleton received a leap year note from an East St. Louis widow.

A letter addressed to Schneider's office in the House of Representatives building stated that the writer had noticed the Wisconsin representative's name among a list of Congressional bachelors published in a St. Louis newspaper.

"It being leapyear, I suppose they are having lots of fun about it," says the unknown writer, adding, "I picked your name out and thought I would drop you a line."

An invitation to visit St. Louis follows, accompanied by an offer to drive the representative around in the writer's car to view the sights.

ASK DARROW TO JOIN DEFENSE IN LYNCHING CASE

Honolulu —(P)—A possibility Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, may come to Honolulu, to defend Mrs. Granville Fortescue society matron; Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., her son-in-law and two naval men charged with lynching a Hawaiian, may re- sult in changing the order of trial of this city's two most widely known criminal cases.

The Chicago attorney has been offered the case and is reported to be considering it favorably. Dispatches from New York said both Darrow and Dudley Field Malone, New York attorney, have been invited to join the defense. It was learned that they con- ferred in New York over the proposal.

In the event either or both ac- cept, it was considered probable the second degree murder trial, scheduled for March 10, would be delayed to permit the new coun- sel to become acquainted with de- tails, and possible the so-called Massie assault case would be re- tried first.

Mrs. Fortescue and her co-de- fendants are accused of shooting Joseph Kahahawai, one of five suspected assaulters of Mrs. Massie.

The first trial of the alleged as- sailants of Mrs. Massie resulted in a jury disagreement.

GARNER WANTS HIS NAME WITHDRAWN

Speaker Doesn't Want to Try to Secure Georgia Delegation

Washington —(P)—The country was treated today to the contradic- tive spectacle of Speaker Garner's strongest supporters for the presi- dency pleading against efforts to se- cure for him the Georgia delegation to the Democratic national conven- tion.

Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, chosen leader of the Pro-Gar- ner forces and intimate friend of the speaker, has sent G. H. Howard of Atlanta a request that he with- draw his Garner-proxy candidacy in the Georgia primary. The request was coupled with the flat assertion that the speaker was not a candi- date and would not file in any state primary. Nevertheless word from Georgia was that Judge Howard would continue his efforts.

That Garner would not go into any primaries requiring consent, di- rect of indirect, of the candidate himself, was a foregone conclusion in view of the speaker's determined stand to have nothing to do with the movement on his behalf. The Ray- burn move may be interpreted as an effort to protect the speaker from any appearance of tacit consent to the proxy race. It might be a move to prevent a decisive defeat, since the state's vote has been considered to be in the pocket of Governor Roo- sevelt of New York.

Surprise Candidates Appear As Last Nomination Papers Come In

NEW CONTESTS CROP UP FOR COUNCIL SEATS

Sergt. Frank Johnson Opposes A. C. Bosser for City Attorney

The political pot coughed up a few surprises Wednesday when the last nomination papers were filed. Sergeant Frank J. Johnson of the Appleton police department was admitted to the bar last year, has entered the race for city attorney, opposing A. C. Bosser, incumbent, and four new aspirants, Christ Schink, J. J. Cameron, W. H. Van Herheyden and O. M. Lundquist, have appeared in the aldermanic contest.

There may be a referendum on the city's appropriation for the artillery band at the general election, as 100 persons have signed petitions asking for a reduction in the band appropriation. The petition asks that the present ordinance, which permits the spending of $10,000 for band music, be amended to limit the sum to not more than $3,000 annually. If this amendment is not approved by the council, the petitioners ask that the proposed change be submitted to referendum in the spring election.

The expected dark horse in the mayoralty campaign failed to materialize, so the battle will be between Mayor John Goodland, Jr., and A. C. Rule, former mayor. This is the third time the two men have fought for the mayor's chair. Rule beat Goodland in 1926, and Goodland defeated Rule in 1930.

EXPECT ADDITIONAL MEN WILL GET JOBS IN APPLETON SOON

Warmer Weather to Be Signal for Repair and Decorating Work

Hope that more Appleton persons can be put to work soon has been expressed by the American legion employment office with the rise in temperature and the expectation that spring weather may arrive within a few weeks.

The medium through which the additional unemployed men are expected to be put to work is the $10,613 painting and redecorating program of Appleton people as reported in the job survey.

When the American legion and citizens made their house to house canvass early in the month they sought jobs for the man and woman to the block plan, and made a survey of work householders planned to do to improve homes.

Results of the survey recently were gathered and the total amount estimated at $10,613. The cost of the various jobs ranges from $8 to $750. The total number of jobs is about 120 and the work classified as painting and redecorating homes and offices.

With positive proof that the spring season has arrived there will be other types of building and repairing. The work is expected to range from small garages and buildings to several large additions and new buildings being contemplated by manufacturers and business men and Lawrence college.

The total number of men and women working out of the legion office is better than 200, according to P. A. Hammond, in charge of the bureau. Just a fraction of the number are employed full time. Mr. Hammond estimated but all are doing something part of the time.

All city employment work now is being handled through the legion office it is said. Everyone is cooperating, Mr. Hammond said, and as rapidly as new jobs turn up men are sent to work.

HOOVER AGREES TO DEMOCRATIC PLAN

He Still Believes, However, That He Should Reorganize Government Activities

Washington—(AP)—President Hoover has acquiesced pleasantly to the Democratic determination that congress shall do the economy reorganizing of government activities, but he sticks to the belief that he could do it better.

In a formal statement at office-closing time yesterday, the chief executive expressed delight that congress was getting active about that 25 years it had been trying to do some effective reorganizing without success, always running up against too great opposition. He conceded that the present "transcendent need for economy" gave more hope that something would be accomplished.

It is because of past failures, he said, that he continues to believe the power of reorganization should be lodged with the president. This the democratic-controlled house has refused flatly to do. Mr. Hoover made no mention whatever of Speaker Garner's sharply critical statement last Sunday refusing to give blanket authority to Mr. Hoover, questioning his motives in asking for it, and upbraiding the Republicans for trying to claim all the credit accruing from the reign of cooperation in congress. The president's statement was timed to follow yesterday's announcement by the speaker of the Democratic economy committee to report reorganization plans by April 15.

Mr. Hoover had an indirect slap at the Democratic plan to merge the war and navy in his assertion that it is a difficult job to effect consolidations and abolitions "so wisely as not to injure the morale or our army and navy and other essential government services."

TWO YOUTHS FINED FOR DESTROYING PROPERTY

Two Neenah youths, Phillip Coates and Melvin Behnke paid fines of $55 and costs each before Justice John Hume at Chilton Wednesday morning after they pleaded guilty of destroying property. The youths were arrested by Sheriff Gordon Jensen, Chilton. The runner marks of the ice boat used by the boys was followed across the lake. Measuring the distance between the runner marks, Sheriff Jensen discovered the boat at Neenah and the arrest followed. The boat is owned by George Goldner, Neenah.

GROUPS AGREE ON MOVE TO ELIMINATE "LAME DUCK" MEET

Washington—(AP)—Senate and house conferees agreed on a compromise today on the terms of the Norris constitutional amendment eliminating "lame duck" sessions of congress and providing new inauguration dates.

A compromise was reached providing that congress meet on Jan. 3 and that the president and vice president take office on Jan. 20.

It was also agreed that congress be given authority to enact a law prescribing the manner of selection of a president in the event a president-elect dies before assuming office.

Senator Norris (R. Neb.) predicted an agreement on the whole amendment at tomorrow's meeting. The house provision requiring that the amendment be ratified within seven years remains to be settled.

There is considerable disagreement on this.

17 FRESHMEN AT COLLEGE HONORED FOR SCHOLARSHIP

Three Appleton Students Included in List of Those Recognized

Seventeen members of the freshman class at Lawrence college, including three Appleton students, have received recognition for scholastic excellence last semester, according to Gordon Clapp, dean of freshmen.

The number of students receiving honors this year is somewhat less than last year, since the honors have been accorded on the basis of the new grade point grading system for the first time. Mr. Clapp reported.

Five students have received high honors, or an average under the new system of 2.75 grade points. Formerly, high honors were accorded those who had maintained an average of 93 or above. Two Appleton students were included in this group. They are Ellen Balliet and Anita Cast. Marjorie Freund, Seymour; Margaret Moore, Racine; and Shigeto Tsuru, Nagaya, Japan, also received the high honor rating.

Twelve students received the honor rating, having maintained an average of 2.25 grade points throughout the first semester. Those included in this group are: Norman Clapp, Appleton; Margaret Berry, Menominee, Minn.; William Culmer, Duluth, Minn.; Oscar Gram, Milwaukee; Jean Kerr, Green Bay; David Owen, Oak Park, Ill.; Rosemary Wiley, Chippewa Falls; Robert Williams, Fox Lake; Dorothea Wolf, Milwaukee; Ervin Zingler, Suring. Under the former system, students were accorded the honor rating for maintaining an average in all subjects of 85 to 89.

Five students who did not quite attain the necessary rating to be included in the honor group received mention for their excellent work. These students are David Jones, Burton Kellogg, Donald Mueller, Mary Reeder, and Edward Roebber.

BALMY BREEZES BOOST TEMPERATURE OF CITY

Balmy breezes are blowing in this direction from the south and southwest keeping the mercury at moderate heights. At 6 o'clock this morning it registered 33 degrees above zero.

PLAN TO CELEBRATE T. B. ERADICATION

The commissioners are arranging a program, which probably will be held in Madison and persons prominently interested in T. B. eradication will be invited to speak. The date has not been fixed.

HURLEY WON'T TESTIFY BEFORE CONGRESS GROUP

Criticize Secretary for "Failure to Cooperate" With Congress

Washington—(AP)—Chairman Cochran told the house expenditures committee today that Secretary Hurley had refused to testify on a pending bill for a department of public works and criticized the cabinet officer for "lack of cooperation" with congress.

"President Hoover thanks us for cooperating in his consolidation plan and then Secretary Hurley refuses to come up here and testify," Cochran said. "I think the committee should go ahead without reference to desires of cabinet officers involved."

Before Cochran made that suggestion, Representative Schafer (R. Wis.) moved that the committee directly invite Hurley to testify. The original invitation was for the secretary either to come personally or send a representative.

"I make the motion, Mr. chairman," Schafer said, "that we request the secretary of War to come up here himself."

Hurley explained in a letter which Cochran border that the war department opposed some portions of the pending bills and had already expressed its opinion. Also, Hurley wrote, "it is believed that the recommendations for the reorganization of the executive departments contained in the president's message of Feb. 17 are far superior to the proposals contained in the two bills under consideration, and would, if enacted into law, accomplish the desired end much more effectively."

The secretary said: "It is therefore believed unnecessary to submit any further statement in the matter as requested in your letter of Feb. 20, or to present any witnesses to represent the war department before the committee."

BUCHAREST SHELTERS RUSSIAN REFUGEES

Bucharest, Rumania—(AP)—Nine bullet-wounded survivors of a group which crossed the Danube from Russia on the ice, eluding Soviet border guards, were in a serious condition at Olanceti where they were taken to hospitals, advices from there today said.

Unwounded survivors of the group which was the Danube line, were reported to have said they feared deportation to Siberia by Soviet authorities because of complaints they made on living conditions which they described as "unsupportable."

They said the Soviet authorities took all their produce and paid them in almost worthless paper which was not sufficient to buy their food. The group of 62 agreed to meet on the bank of the Danube, they said, and take advantage of the changing of the border guards to cross the river. They were hardly on the ice, they said, when rocket flares lit the river up and a rain of bullets and hand grenades burst upon them. Only 22 reached the Rumanian shore, and nine of these were wounded by the gunfire.

Camouflage Ship On Movie Lot To Save Lives Of Gulls

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press
Hollywood, Cal.—(CPA)—The lives of a number of sea gulls have been saved as the result of the application of wartime camouflage to the huge steamship setting on the south lot of the Fox studios at Movietone City. Because of its camouflage the boat no longer looks like a steamship to the hostile aviators who in a coming pictures will seek it from the air. Because of its camouflage it also no longer looks like a steamship to the sea gulls.

Built originally for scenes in the Joan Bennett-John Boles pictures, "Widow's Might," the ship is unusually large and realistic. It attracted a number of storm blown gulls from the Pacific shores, less than 10 miles distant. The arrival of the birds was taken in the nature of a joke and as they circled through the picture their presence lent a valuable touch to reality to the shipboard action.

After the completion of the picture, however, the birds continued to circle the ship. When two of them fell to the ground exhausted it was decided that they had thought the ship a real one and had been waiting patiently for food to be thrown overboard from the galley.

The camouflage has served a two-fold purpose. It has sent the birds away and has relieved the feelings of the more nervous studio workers who were unaccustomed to having so many gulls sail over their heads.

NEW TAX BILL TO BE READY SOON

Speaker Garner Says Measure Will Contain Manufacturers' Sales Tax

Snell said he would personally oppose extraneous projects before congress requiring additional outlays from the depleted treasury. "It's my judgment that congress should spend more time reducing government expenses instead of spending so much time trying to find new sources of revenue," he declared.

"In order to get money enough to balance the budget and operate the government on a sound financial basis, every man and practically every known product will have to be taxed."

Meanwhile, the ways and means committee decided against the proposed repeal of foreign tax credits, which was estimated to bring in about $35,000,000. It decided that such a move would have a harmful effect on American export business.

This was the second of three administrative policies to be disposed. The committee decided, however, to modify the foreign tax credit law to force American plants with subsidiaries abroad to pay the full income corporation tax of 12 per cent. This is expected to bring in about $6,000,000, according to a treasury estimate.

FIND EXPERTS CAN'T ESTIMATE TAX COLLECTION

Huge Losses During 1931 Makes Advance Forecasts Impossible

Washington—(P)—Treasury experts, who in years past have forecast almost exactly the amount of income tax the government would collect on March 15 each year, find themselves in a quandary this year and unable to find a basis upon which to estimate tax receipts next month.

The sharp decline in income in 1930, which caused income tax collections last year to drop off $559,000,000, was continued in 1931. In addition tax payers will write off losses this year, it is feared, in greater amounts than last year. The deductions which will be taken for losses have been the stumbling block in making accurate estimates of the amount that may be collected from the first installment of tax on 1931 incomes. This is due the fifteenth of next month.

In all, probably less than 2,000,000 persons will pay income tax this year. In normal years the number was reduced from around 4,000,000 to 2,500,000 through broadening of exemptions but the decreased business is expected to take about half a million persons off the list because their incomes have dropped below the taxable amount.

If the government collects $250,000,000 from income tax payments next month officials will feel they are lucky, but some doubt that this amount will be realized.

Big Reductions

Last year the March 15 tax payments amounted to $334,530,000. A drop of $225,000,000 from the year previous, while in 1929 the first quarter returned the record amount of $601,569,000 and in 1928, $515,690,000.

Income tax payments this fiscal year (since last July 1) have amounted to $551,058,714 as compared with $1,162,717,108 in the same period of the previous year.

While the experts are fretting themselves over the amount of tax to be received this year about 25,000 taxpayers throughout the nation are getting the bad news that their 1930 income tax payments are insufficient and they must pay up in 60 days the difference the internal revenue bureau believes is due, or carry their case to the United States board of tax appeals.

Under the 1928 revenue law income tax cases are outlined after two years so the 1930 cases would be outlined after March 15 unless the bureau notified the taxpayers of the deficiency. Such action suspends the statute of limitations until the case has been decided.

At about the time income tax payments are due, the treasury will have to conduct its March financing to meet maturing securities and to operate the government until the next tax collections come in. This year it is probable the financing will have to be larger than usual. Some observers have guessed the financing would be around $800,000,000 in short term securities.

USE BLOOD SERUM TO COMBAT STUTTERING

University of Wisconsin Associate Discovers Root of Speech Defect

Madison—(P)—In the belief that stuttering is caused by inorganic deficiencies in the blood, George A. Kopp, research associate at the University of Wisconsin has succeeded in overcoming the speech defect by increasing the blood serum calcium.

The bio-chemical study of the cause of stuttering was started more than two years ago. More than 20 persons submitted to tests during the past year. Mr. Kopp reported that the increase of the blood serum calcium temporarily arrested stuttering in five boys and a girl.

Most successful was the application of Colip's parathormone, injected in 10 unit doses every night or ten hours until a high calcium concentration was reached. Mr. Kopp used cod liver oil, ultra-violet light, viosterol and calcium lactate with indifferent success, he said.

"This work is not offered as a cure or as a method of treatment," he said, "but it is merely an experimental approach, and it is only one phase of a series of studies that we are attempting to help solve the age-old, yet fascinating, mystery—the cause of stuttering."

REEFS OF DISTRIBUTION

A vivid illustration of the sometimes predominant role played by distribution in Contract Bridge is illustrated below. In Bridge we have two measuring sticks by which to determine the trick-taking power of the hands we hold. One is the honor-trick yardstick and the other the distributional standard determined by suit length, either long or short. The most barren and most futile distribution of a hand is what is sometimes called the notrump type; that is, such distribution as 4 3 3 3, 4 4 3 2 or 5 3 3 2. With hands of this type there must be plenty of honor-tricks if high contracts are to be made. With hands containing singletons or two long suits or voids, the necessity for home honor-tricks is not nearly so pronounced, as is shown on the hand below:

Many Prodigies Want To Enter Northwestern "U"

Evanston, Ill. — (P)—Apparently there's a lot more precocity in America than even a university President would imagine.

More than 100 applications had been received today, 10 days after President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university announced that his school would like to admit, next fall, a half-dozen 13 to 15 year-old prodigies.

And this before any of the school principals, to whom President Scott made his only direct appeal, had responded with any nominations.

The applications received, made in surprising numbers by the children themselves from various parts of the nation, were inspired solely by brief notices carried on press wires.

In the face of this reaction, President Scott would not venture to forecast today what the "harvest" will be when the scores of educators who have nominated the mental marvels who have come under their observation.

But he is convinced that there is plenty of material for the sort of educational new departure he has proposed, and already has begun contemplating enlarging the group to a dozen, six boys and six girls.

Need Competition

President Scott explained that a few "superior" students who had enrolled at Northwestern when extremely young had been more than satisfactory in grades and conduct, but, being in an age class by themselves, have lacked the stimulus that comes from cooperation and competition with equals (in age and experience).

"It is planned that these students live in the same quarters, so that each will have friends of the same age and interests outside the class room," President Scott said.

When FAT Goes Back Comes Vim

The World Way

The right way for treating obesity is now employed by doctors the world over. It is based on a new discovery—a gland cause.

Modern science finds that a great cause of excess fat lies in a scanty gland secretion. The food which should be turned to energy simply piles up fat. Thus people grow both fat and lazy through the same gland cause.

Doctors everywhere now feed that lacking factor. They know that abnormal exercise and diet can never bring fat down, and vim back, while that lack exists.

Marmola prescription tablets do what modern doctors do. They feed a like gland, taken from food animals. A famous medical laboratory prepares it to fit the average case.

Marmola has been used for 24 years—millions of boxes of it. Users have told others the results, and the use has spread. Excess fat has been disappearing fast in those years, as everybody knows. It will go faster when more people recognize this right way to reduce.

Go try Marmola. A book in the box gives the formula, and tells why it does what it does. Cease the methods which have failed you. Combat the cause. Do what multitudes are doing with results you see. Go start today. At all drugists.

RAIL HEADS BEMOAN PASSING OF ROADS

Small Lines Will Soon Be Extinct, Company Officials Prophecy

Milwaukee—(P)—The small town railroad roundhouse is doomed. Doomed also are many short rail road branch lines. Soon they'll be streaks of red rust through the weeds which will flourish on the right of way.

These are the predictions of railroad officials—prophecies which they read in the red figures on the ledgers. Temporary abandonment of the third ward roundhouse of the Northwestern road here and closing of the busy stall roundhouse of the Milwaukee road in West Milwaukee show the trend of railway development, officials said.

The cause is three fold—the depression, motor vehicle competition and the new super locomotive. In the service of the Milwaukee road now are 22 locomotives which are 82 feet long and weigh 65,000 pounds. Built for sturdy service these giants can haul 400 to 600 miles without visiting the roundhouse. Time was when an engine needed to be tinkered every 100 miles, and so numerous roundhouses were required.

The branch line has been given an almost fatal blow by the motor truck, officials said. They cite as an example one Wisconsin branch line of 39 miles on which there are six stations. A single station on that branch used to give the railroad $1,000,000 of business a month. Last year the gross income of that whole branch was $351,000. But railroads have not considered that even on short haul business they have been defeated by the motor truck. Experiments with small, light engines of new type for short hauls, and with door to door pickup and delivery of freight have been made. Considerable success has been attained in these experiments, but indications are that railroads are prepared to spring some surprises when general business conditions improve.

Madison — An airplane engine manufacturing company here has developed and delivered to the U. S. Navy Department, an engine which incorporates a chemical cooling system. It is said to have the advantages of both direct air cooling and liquid cooling without the disadvantages of either.

Pathfinders Run 20,000 Miles, Look Good for 20,000 More

Alvin Krabbe Reports but One Flat Tire in Year

The expenditure was only $20.74, but the five Goodyear Pathfinder tires and tubes, purchased a year ago by Alvin Krabbe, 1403 N. Superior st., Appleton, have run over 20,000 miles. With but one flat tire in this time, the tires look good for another year of service.

The combination of Gibson low prices and free service with the quality of the Goodyear Pathfinder, Mr. Krabbe declares, has led all his friends and relatives to purchase these tires with resulting satisfaction.

Three and tubes such as Mr. Krabbe purchased were 30 x 3 1/2 Goodyear Pathfinders, which cost but $4.06 each in pairs.

PRECOCIOUS STUDENTS
Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, proposes an interesting experiment in the field of human psychology. The subject of his study is the precocious student.
The call has gone out for six youngsters between the ages of 13 and 15 who can meet college entrance requirements and whose unusual abilities will be given the stimulus that comes from cooperation and competition with equals. By close association in their social and intellectual activities, giving these six freshmen an enjoyable life in the company of their own kind, Dr. Scott expects to demonstrate the fallacy of the popular notion that brilliant children do not turn out well.
Present records show that four precocious students have entered Northwestern University. "Who's Who" lists one as the author of several novels and now the editor of two magazines; another recently was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship at Oxford; the other two, now in college, rank high in their grades and one of them, a girl who entered at 14, has earned practically all her expenses.
The education of gifted children constitutes as much a special problem as does that of the backward and underprivileged child. Modern educational methods constantly are developing and improving facilities to meet the peculiar needs of all classes.
The precocious child is a rare individual whose development must be handled with care. His intellectual tempo is one of high speed and the road on which he travels must be built with intelligence and foresight to avoid collisions or bypaths that sometimes lead to mental chaos.
The association of several prodigies into a segregated class under intelligent direction will be an interesting experiment in mental hygiene. The thought arises that should their intellectual development keep pace with past performance, it may not take long before the instructors become the instructed.
WALKING TO SCHOOL
Several Missouri newspapers commented on the fact that two boys living near the town of Boonville walk six miles to school every day, and do all the chores at home in addition; and it's interesting, not because the boys have to walk so far, but because the fact that they do is considered worthy of mention in the public prints.
A generation ago there would have been no news in such a story. Walk six miles to school? There were thousands and thousands of youngsters in all parts of the United States who did it every day throughout the school year, and thought nothing of it. In many rural districts long hikes like that were the rule and not the exception.
Those, of course, were the days when the little red schoolhouse was a more familiar institution than it is now. No one had heard of consolidated schools then, nor of busses picking up all the children, carrying them off to school and bringing them home again in the evening.
The typical country school was a one-room, one-teacher affair, drawing its pupils from a radius of six or eight miles around; and the children trudged back and forth, through deep snow in winter and through rain, dust, mud or wind in spring and autumn. And no one ever thought that those children were undergoing hardships; on the contrary, the children were considered extremely lucky to have education available at the price of a little extended footwork.
This isolated, one-room school hasn't vanished yet, of course; but it is in the process of vanishing, and the system that is replacing it is vastly better from all standpoints. Children's bodies are not taxed now as they used to be. Their minds are given better training once the school room is reached. Life is easier, pleasanter, more carefully planned.
Meanwhile, those two Missouri boys who have to walk so far each day might be comforted, if they were aware of it, by the fact that they are carrying on a brave old tradition. What they are doing now, most farm boys had to do a few decades ago.

The future possibilities of the photo-electric cell, better known in common parlance as the "electric eye," seems limited only by man's imagination. The process of transforming electricity into light was a long time on the way but when Edison perfected his incandescent lamp, what had theretofore been considered a visionary dream became a commonplace reality.
The photo-electric cell reverses the process by converting light into electricity. The simple method of letting light fall on a chemically prepared tube causes electrons to fly about and there comes an electric current, feeble as yet, but full of infinite possibilities. Already marvelous feats are performed with this newfangled dynamo which needs only a beam of light to set it going. It counts and turns lights on and off, it matches colors, measures the intensity and variation of the light of stars and makes possible the transmission of pictures over wires.
The New York Times suggests possibilities equal to the wildest dreams of the alchemists in harnessing the "electric eye" to the blazing light of the sun. Light catchers that will convert this enormous energy that shines upon us into electric current may "carry us in queer railway trains, drive airplanes and automobiles, light cities and homes, excavate holes to be filled by skyscrapers and cook meals in millions of homes."
All of which indicates the fallacy of those beliefs that there is nothing new under the sun. Man is still standing in blind ignorance on the threshold of a brilliant future and it may take only the present wee current from the photo-electric cell to tell him what the sunbeams are really made of.

When London and Honolulu talked to each other over the telephone for the first time, the other day, the London speaker read "Mary's Little Lamb" to the listener in Honolulu. Tsk, tsk. Why did it have to be "Mary's Little Lamb"? But, if the listener in Honolulu responded with some music from Hawaiian steel guitars, then Honolulu was revenged. Outside of "Mary's Little Lamb," we can't think of anything we rather not listen to over the long-distance telephone than Hawaiian music.
Or leave out the long-distance telephone and keep the listen.
Nice number—"Chances Are."
Understand that Jimmy Crowley, the Green Bay lad who made good at football, is to leave Michigan State for the University of Iowa and that Fritz Crisler is to leave Minnesota for Princeton. All of these changes seemed positive as this was written yesterday, though they still lacked confirmation. The University of Wisconsin was supposed to be interviewing Boy Nyland of Tennessee yesterday, too. But nothing was positive about that. The only thing sure about the situation at Madison is the uncertainty.
All of which may be entirely uninteresting.

LOOKING ON THE BRIGHT SIDE
Of life's numerous irritations there are some I can't escape
There are keys which I must carry 'epite their weight and bulging shape.
Since I own an automobile, in my very best attire
I expect on sad occasions to be forced to change a tire.
But they've made me give up smoking and henceforth to my delight
I shan't need a pocket lighter which refuses to ignite.
I've a fancy pocket pencil which is often out of lead
And a fountain pen which isn't what the advertisement said.
There are certain common evils which I patiently endure
Such as guessing what the hour is from a watch which isn't sure.
There are countless irritations I must suffer day and night
But no more I'll lose my temper over lighters that won't light.
On the best of days I fancy must annoyances arise
There are flaws in every product which the brains of men devise.
There are shoe strings which desert me on the mornings I am late.
And my ever-ready calendar seems to always be out of date.
My safety razor cuts me, and my soothing lotions bite,
But I'm done with looking foolish over lighters that don't light.

Personal Health Talks
BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author
ONE OR TWO MORE WHEEZES ABOUT ASTHMA
In our last talk about asthma we suggested a whole flock of remedies, and very good remedies, too, as a number of readers have assured us, but that's pretty risky for the conductor. In the first place, there is always the danger that the names or remedies may be terribly pried in the printing, and—well, after I had let the copy for that last asthma talk pass out of my hands I didn't rest easy till several days elapsed and the mortality returns were all in. Fortunately the mortality rate was low enough to encourage further adventures in newspaper therapeutics. I have three more remedies to suggest today, and if any medical colleague doesn't like it I hope he will send me his address and office hours so I can refer the casualties in his territory to him.
Mind, if you have a touch of asthma you are not compelled to take all these remedies I am recommending, but in case you do get tired of your wheezes I don't think it will do you any harm to try a few of my remedies, and if you decide to have a go at them here's hoping you may make a happy choice.
First, then, not a few asthma sufferers have reported prolonged relief from taking calcium lactate, say ten or twenty grains three times a day, after food, with a good drink of water, milk, tea or coffee to chase it down, for ten weeks, twice a year. Calcium (lime) is the element in which the American dietary is deficient in many instances. Calcium has an antispasmodic effect.
Along with the calcium, the asthmatic subject should take sunbaths or have ultraviolet lamp treatments (or have a little ultraviolet lamp in his own home) with the object of acquiring a coat of tan. Ultraviolet light promotes calcium utilization or metabolism in the body.
Finally I recommend a nice big spoonful of luscious, rich golden slow-running fresh pure undyed cod liver oil every day except in the very warm summer season, for every asthma sufferer. If you have some little prejudice against cod liver oil, then you may substitute viosterol, which gives the same amount of Vitamin D in a few drops that you get in a whole beaker of the oil. Anyway, Vitamin D, whatever it may be, is good medicine for any victim of asthma, and it is a fair substitute for sunlight on naked skin or for ultraviolet ray (not "violet ray") treatment.
All three remedies I am suggesting today are just my remedies. If they do you no good they will do you no harm, and so I believe Father Hippocrates would not condemn me for suggesting such remedies, tho I can't answer for the profession at large.
I have now told you several good bedtime stories about your wheezes. Now you tell me one, preferably about your experience with these remedies I have suggested.
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Weak Eyes Hereditary
Would the child of a couple normal and healthy but who both wear glasses for reading be likely to have poor eyesight? (A. D. R.)
Answer—Yes.
Baby Is Little Animal
If I put my six weeks old baby in her crib right after nursing and lay her on her side she fusses and cries, but if I lay her on her stomach she goes right to sleep and sleeps till next feeding time. Is there any harm in a baby sleeping this way? Mrs. R. B.
Answer—No. It is all right if the baby prefers that position. Sleeping prone lying on belly—not "stomach" is really the natural way to sleep. All animals sleep so.
Try Upper or Lower Side
I could sleep fine only knowing the side is the proper position I try to lie on my right side, till I wake with the right arm numb and have to rub it to restore circulation, then I turn onto left side, and soon the same thing. . . . P. T.
Answer—Try the position taken by the baby above. Or lie flat on your back. There is no "proper" position for sleep; whatever position one finds most comfortable is all right.

The Tynmites
By Hal Cochran
THE caterpillar looked real queer and Society cried, "It's a queer little thing, what is this big thing made of? That's what I would like to know. The seats are cute as they can be and seem just big enough for me. Say, if this thing can travel on the ground, what makes it go?"
The builder man just smiled and said, "What questions pop into your head, but I will gladly answer them, if you'll just give me time. You see, if you'll just give me time, I'll show you the things that make it go. Like the shoot-the-chutes and swings. This bug is somewhat better, though, 'cause it knows how to climb."
"Beneath it there are little wheels and when the bug goes, each one squeals. Perhaps it's 'cause they're rusty. I will oil them some bright day. Now, if you Tynmites will sit still, I'll give you all a dandy thrill. I merely push a button and you'll be right on your way."
"Where will this take us?" Duncy cried. "We might not care to have this ride. Suppose we land in a stream and get all soaking wet? Why don't you join us? Come along! Perhaps, then nothing will go wrong. You own the bug and you can make it act real nice, I'll bet."
Again the man laughed long and loud. "Oh, no there's plenty in your crowd," he answered. "I will stay right here. I have much work to do. When everything is said and done, I know you'll have a heap of fun. And now I guess it's time that I cry out goodby to you."
Then something happened very quick. It was a funny little trick that made the caterpillar's back swish over and close tight. The man had pushed a button once. It was one of his clever stunts. Of course all of the Tynmites were buried now from sight.

A Bystander In Washington
BY HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington — Political observers in Washington are inclined to think that Joe Tumulty's sizzling denunciation of those Democratic leaders who are trying to "run away from the peace ideas of Woodrow Wilson" was a display of Irish temper.
Joseph Patrick Tumulty today is as loyal to the war president and Wilsonian doctrine as he was when he served as private secretary to Wilson.
He simply became angry when he saw first Newton D. Baker and then Franklin Roosevelt — both heirs apparent to Wilson's principles if ever two men were — come out with statements opposing the League of Nations as a political issue in the coming campaign.
The Irish blood in Joseph Patrick boiled when he saw this. He couldn't help indulging in the picture of these leaders "standing in sackcloth and ashes before the shrine Woodrow Wilson, saying You are again captain of my soul."
This is not the first time Tumulty has come to the defense of the cause of his idol.
When the late Senator Lodge's posthumous book appeared in 1924, in which Wilson was criticized for his course in the League controversy, Tumulty was there with just as well-worded a defense.
The characterized Lodge's book as "The Fall Edition of the Hymn of Hate."
"It is regrettable indeed," said Tumulty, "that at the end of his career so distinguished a man should have put his great talents to so base a use as attempting, by insinuation and innuendo, to besmirch the reputation of a man, who, at a critical hour, single-handed and alone, sought to apply to the ill of the world the healing balm of peace."
Joseph Patrick had his misunderstanding with Woodrow Wilson and all that. But he's come to bat at any time when he thinks that Wilson is being betrayed.
Capital Knows Him
Tumulty is a familiar figure around the capital. He is out of politics now, quietly practicing law in a big uptown office building.
There has been some talk that he might seek a place in the Senate from New Jersey — his home state — this year. So far he has laughed at any mention of it.
But it's hard to believe he wouldn't like the prefix Joseph Patrick Tumulty with "Senator."
man who is on the farm can't afford to hire a man. Some can't take them for their board. If a family was put there who would buy the stock and tools that are needed to make just a living on the farm. Maybe there are new ways of doing farm work that I don't know about. Now they are trying to start to sell some kind of stocks or bonds to circulate money. The poor fish are going to buy these. Too when he needs money bad the rich man buys him off for a little or nothing. The big man gets bigger and the poor man, well, he was just fish. Maybe the government is good but right now everything is shaky and why should the working man always be the goat. You can't trust even your best friend. Will some one tell me what it's all about and how it will end. There is only one sure thing. We know there is an Almighty Power and Judge who is so over all be they rich or poor.

All attempts at expressing appreciation so far have been smothered with the unassuming denial of unusual thoughtfulness on their part. "Continuous creating of good will is a part of the business."
Well, granted that this is a profitable principle for any business, we submit that when a news office—and is there a busier place in the world—offers to spend time before the day of publication teaching the students, to spend still more time with the students on the date of publication, and then—with a tired and hectic day at their backs and the remembrance of all of twenty bustling students intensifying the discomforts of over-crowded conditions—to suggest that for the students' good they really should come back the following day and be shown their mistakes, we say, that this is such an extension of professional good will that it is no longer recognizable. To us, it looks as if it had grown to the proportions of a genuine and sympathetic interest in the educational welfare of our students.

BY WALTER LIPPMANN

PROSPECTS AT GENEVA

Geneva, Feb. 22.

It is unfortunate that this gathering at Geneva is popularly known as a disarmament conference. It is in no sense of the term a disarmament conference. It is one scene in one act of that long drama of world-wide readjustment, which began with the armistice and will end, no man knows when, but certainly not for decades to come. In a real sense, therefore, the conference cannot succeed and cannot fail. If it achieves the utmost that any informed person hopes for, the task of establishing order amidst this planetary upheaval would have progressed only a little. If it broke up in complete disagreement without anything whatsoever achieved, the governments would within a few months have to resume the negotiations which they had broken off. For what is being discussed at Geneva is not some theoretical project which can be dropped and then forgotten, but certain absolutely inescapable problems arising out of the fact that no nation in the world today has yet adjusted itself to the consequences of the war.

It is therefore necessary to discount two schools of commentators who are writing about Geneva. One school would test its work by the degree to which the conference approaches the idea of total disarmament and those who would test its work by the degree to which the conference disposes of the deepest issues which divide Europe. These two schools of thought are, as Mister Dooley once said of two Presidential candidates, as far apart as the two poles and as much alike. The absolutists of disarmament start as sentimentalists and must end as cynics. The absolutists of the hard-boiled diplomacy start as cynics and find it very easy to continue. Both are almost certainly wrong for opposite but similar reasons; both are judging the conference not by what it is really doing, but what they subjectively expect it to do. Each school in its own way approaches the issues like a sick man, who goes to his doctor demanding that he produce either an elixir of immortality or a confession that medicine is a failure.

There are, it seems to me, two distinct proceedings at Geneva. There is a forum in which the spokesmen of governments have been expressing the hopes and the special interests of their prevailing majorities at home. Then there is a complicated diplomatic negotiation in progress by which the principle powers are attempting to make some advance in the post-war readjustment.

The public declarations have about been concluded. Each delegation has uttered the catchwords which are popular at home. Each has spoken the words which its native Hearsts and Hitlers and Franklin Bouillons and Rothermeres insist on hearing. Each has offered to surrender the weapons that it does not need, does not have, that it fears the most, or cannot afford. Each has proclaimed its devotion to peace and its complete unselfishness. Finally, because every principal delegation is acutely aware of the gravity of the hour, because it only half believes much of what it is politically necessary to say, every important speech has been marked by a moderation of manner so genuine that it has conveyed the sense that the big talk is to be regarded as something which had to be said but must not be taken at its face value. There can be no doubt that the delegations mean to be more reasonable than they sound.

The diplomatic negotiation behind this curtain of oratory is concerned with specific problems that have long and will long continue to engage the attention of the powers. There are four, perhaps five chief matters, all of which are consequences of the war.

There is the Franco-German problem which, from the point of view of this conference, is specifically the question of whether Germany is to attain equality of right in armaments. This problem in fact wished to exercise the right to arm equally with France. But since it is fairly certain that republican Germany does not wish to exercise the right and that Hitlerite Germany could not find the money to do it, the problem is probably soluble with patience and ingenuity. It is a question of finding a formula which satisfies French and German sensibilities without provoking a race of armaments. A very promising formula is under consideration.

There is the Franco-Italian naval problem which likewise consists in finding a formula which will preserve inequality in fact under the principal of equality of rights. Here, too, because Italy does not intend actually to build as big a navy as the French, there is reason to believe that an agreement is possible.

There is the problem of Franco-British relations which in substance comes down to the question whether Britain and France can agree on a European policy in regard to reparations and frontiers. That problem will be solved, if at all, elsewhere than at Geneva.

There is the problem of Russia's political relation to western Europe. This is not for the moment urgent and would not become so unless there were a German revolution. For Russia is so deeply absorbed in her own affairs that externally she presents no serious threat.

Finally there is the problem of American relations to the political organization of Europe. There are two specific questions here, the first as to whether the United States will or will not establish a regular method of consultation with Europe in place of the existing highly irregular and uncertain methods; the second, as to whether the United States will make any commitments of any kind as to what it will or will not do in case Europe attempts to suppress a war by collective action.

There problems will continue to be problems after this conference adjourns and the only question is whether they will be left in a somewhat easier or in a somewhat more difficult condition. If there is some progress in dealing with the real issues it is reasonable to expect that the conference may write a treaty limiting armaments and even reducing them a little. That will be somewhat important sentimentally and somewhat useful financially. But the true measure of progress is not the size of armaments agreed upon but the extent to which the great powers move toward agreement on their specific dispute.

"Lord, If Thou Wilt Thou Canst Make Me Clean."

(Read Matthew 9:1-13)

When we are wholly incapable of action in our own behalf, God in Christ will take the entire responsibility, if we are receptive of His help. Perhaps we do not quite believe that this is so. Perhaps we are skeptical about God's power to restore us. If so, we simply lose by default. Many lepers there were who might have been healed but were not—only because they did not put themselves unreservedly in His hands. There are times when we can help ourselves, but often we are helpless. At such times we may call out as the leper called, "Lord, if Thou wilt Thou canst make me

PAIR SUSPENDED AFTER DRY RAID

Professor and Instructor Are Out at University of Nebraska

Lincoln—(P)—A liquor raid at the University of Nebraska coliseum has led to the suspension of a professor and an instructor.

The two, Dr. L. C. Wimberly and N. E. Eliason, were chaperones recently at an all-university dance which closed half an hour before the raid by federal officers. Evidence against them and other persons arrested at the same time may be presented to a federal grand jury here next month.

In announcing the suspensions, which are effective until next September, Chancellor E. A. Burnett said the raid had no connection with the party and that testimony taken by the board of regents recently showed no under-graduates were involved.

A small quantity of liquor in the room when the officers arrived was claimed by Alan Williams, a graduate of the university, who is charged with illegal possession of liquor and is free under $1,000 bond. The instructors said afterwards they had just entered the room and found the liquor as the raid started.

Professor Wimberly will continue as editor of the Prairie Schooner, literary publication in which the university is interested. He plans to stay in Lincoln and devote his time to the publication. Mr. Eliason's plans are indefinite.

Prayer: O Thou who art the Healer of every human heart, and whose touch can cleanse the lives of all who put their trust in Thee, help us to have such faith that when we have no power in ourselves, Thy power may be our strength. Preserve us, we beseech Thee, from the misery of unbelief and from the doubt that keeps us poor, and grant that in the extremity of our need we may see the Light of Thy Presence and receive from Thee according to our faith. Amen.

WANT LAW CHANGED TO PERMIT WOMEN TO WORK AT NIGHT

Delegation from Beaver Dam Asks Commission to Reverse Decision

Madison—(P)—Led by Circuit Judge C. M. Davison, a delegation representing virtually all of Beaver Dam's population yesterday appeared to the state industrial commission to rescind its order prohibiting women from working night shifts in factories to permit a Beaver Dam hosiery mill to give employment to about 150 women.

Judge Davison and other speakers said unless the commission permitted the women to work nights the company would be forced to take its orders for night work to its branch plant at Kankakee, Ill.

Recently the commission denied a similar petition by seven manufacturers, stating it could not grant women the right to work on night shifts under the Wisconsin Labor code. Fred M. Wilcox, commission chairman, said it was not likely the commission would reverse its position.

Judge Davison attacked the commission's order, stating that the "women of Wisconsin do not need the guidance of any man, law or commission would reverse its position. He said the commission seeing a moral hazard in night work for women and said "ability to work is more conducive to morality than being forced to walk the streets."

Commissioner Wilcox said: "If any one has the notion we can handle labor laws for Beaver Dam without regard for the rest of the state, he has a lot to learn."

Rescinding of the order in the particular case of Beaver Dam, he said would be discriminatory against other cities in the state.

Teach Child To Dare In Right Field

BY ANGELO PATRI

Did anybody ever dare you to do anything when you were small. Did you do it? So did I. That is the surest way to move a child to action. Dare him to do and he will.

The mistake we make is in losing our tempers and daring him to defy us. He surely will. Then we are in a bad way. We dared the child to offend us and he has done so. If we beat him or shake him or otherwise mistreat him we have done him no good and we have put ourselves in a position where it is going to be hard for us to have communication with him.

It is a mistake to use that word at all. When an angry teacher or parent, of course there should never be such a parent or teacher, strike an attitude and shouts, "How dare you do such a thing?" he is immediately at a great disadvantage. The naughty child has a thrill of pride. He has dared. He has succeeded. He will dare again and succeed again. The idea is welcome to his mind. A child has few opportunities to feel his power. He has been defeated once. And this time to his hurt.

When we know that daring a child will cause him to act we are guilty of his offense. The fault is all our own. We gave him the needed push that sent him over the edge. Our selfishness, our love of domination got the better of us and we wronged the child.

The power that is in the word "Dare" ought to be used for the good of the child. Teach him that there is a great field open to his courage and daring, a field that offers great honor and little competition. Teach him to dare to be right according to his light. Teach him to dare to defend what he believes, what he loves, what he holds sacred. Teach him to dare as Daniel dared and you have done well.

It is as easy to teach that kind of daring as it is to bring out the other sort, the physical daring that he always under the surface ready to spring at a moment's notice. The first challenge brings it rearing. The principal of the school I attended as a little boy knew all about this.

One day our teacher was away and an unfortunate substitute came in his place. We gave him so much trouble that he went out to call the principal to his assistance and we set up all kinds of noise. The principal came and looked at us calmly. We were silent at once. Slowly, slowly he looked us over his eye dwelling on this one and then that so that none of us escaped that steady quiet gaze. At last he sighed and said, "Not one."

We looked at him inquiringly. "Any tool can make a noise. I was looking for the one strong lad who could hold his own and make no noise. I was looking for a lad who dared to be himself and I haven't one in the room." Then he told us the story of Daniel. Everyone of us wished with all our hearts that he had been the one to stand out, the one who dared to be different.

Take that side of the Dare. Teach the child to dare in the right field. To dare to be different, to dare to be his own best self, to dare to do what truth and honor and loyalty demand. Then we'll get somewhere.

Mrs. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

UNFAIR TO CUT ONLY FARM BOARD--STONE

Chairman of Body Says if Decreases Are Made They Should Be General

Washington—(AP)—Chairman Stone said today that he felt it was "unfair to single out the farm board" in reducing governmental salaries.

The farm board head was referring to the action of a senate committee which approved yesterday a reduction in board salaries from $12,000 to $9,600 yearly.

Stone added that if governmental salaries were to be reduced, he felt the slash should be general and that no particular department of the government should be singled out.

In answer to a question, he said the committee action—if approved by congress—would give the impression that "something was wrong with the board."

"I think I could stand the cut and probably other members might but I feel that it would be unfair," he said.

Stone also said he felt there was injustice in the portion of the bill approved by the committee which would limit or prohibit aid to cooperatives whose officers are receiving salaries above certain limits.

"If congress is going to put these restrictions around aid to agricultural organizations," he said, "I feel that they should also be extended to industrial organizations, who are benefiting by loans from the reconstruction finance corporation. Agriculture needs leadership as able as industry and in my opinion this action would tend to do away with such leadership."

THE STORY OF SUE By Margery Hale

Dr. Raynor stood in the door of Ruth's room. His quick eyes saw that something was wrong.

"Measles, mumps, chicken pox.?" he asked Ruth, a twinkle in his eye. "No. Pink ice cream?" She told the story briefly.

"The twinkle deepened, then suddenly disappeared. 'Good grief, don't you know better than to feed a lot of hungry children on such stuff? Why didn't you make sandwiches?'" he asked.

"I suppose you think I wanted to poison them just for the fun of watching their faces turn green," Ruth started. "Queen moans were coming from one little boy and she flew to his rescue without looking back."

"I always thought you were a sensible, reliable sort of person," Dr. Raynor said getting to work.

"Strange, isn't it, how mistaken we can be in people?" Ruth asked maliciously.

"Yes," he said sharply. "You have only luck to thank that this isn't serious. The youngsters will be better in a little while. But it isn't our fault. You did enough this afternoon, to upset anybody's faith in nurses."

"Want my resignation?" Ruth asked after a while when things were calmer.

"Don't be silly. This is the first time you ever lost your balance."

"Then you think it would have been better if I hadn't obeyed my impulses?" she asked.

"Much better."

"I suppose you are going to report for me this—crime?" Ruth asked. Her brown hair was tumbled. There was a smudge of black on one side of her nose. The strange smock she was wearing to protect her dress had a collar that stood up audaciously around her flushed face. There was something in her eyes and her voice.

The bell for the afternoon recess had rung. The children were all in the school yard or downstairs in the rest room. She was alone with Joe Raynor.

He glanced up. Then so suddenly that Ruth couldn't give a startled gasp of surprise, he had kissed her full on her lips. A hard, firm kiss. She realized that she had kissed him back. Then as quickly his arms relaxed and he let her go. Ruth put one hand to her lips, across the place where his kiss had burned. She drew back a little.

But her heart was beating more quickly. It had been an angry one. Ruth knew that Joe Raynor had no more idea why he had done it than she herself had. It had happened—that was all. But it told more than he thought that it did. He was more interested in her than he himself knew. He wanted to kiss her.

"I'm sorry, Ruth," Joe Raynor was saying. "I didn't mean to."

She ignored his apology. Her eyes were dancing. "Then I'm not fired?"

SOCIAL CASTE IS SHOWN BY YOUR POSTURE

BY ALICIA HART

Have you noticed that it is smart now to be a little more formal in the way you carry yourself?

Don't lounge. It just isn't done, except in privacy now. I don't mean that you have to sit up like a West Pointer all the time and develop a rigid outlook on life. But you should develop an easy yet a dignified manner of sitting down.

It is curious, but the way a woman sits often reveals her social caste. For instance, it is distinctly "peasant" to sit with your feet too close, one slightly on top of the other. Likewise it is unbecomingly to catch your toes around the legs of your chairs, and don't get the idea that it is merely being nonchalant and makes you seem young.

Sitting with your knees lolling and your feet turned over actually betrays a great strain on your part to look "comfortable" and at home. Crossing your knees exaggeratedly now is what might be called "old-fashioned." Certainly it is just a little too difficult a pose for this spring.

The woman who sits easily and gracefully, so that you don't particularly notice her feet and legs has the right idea this spring.

She is poised lightly on her chair, won't have to make a terrific effort to get up and gives the impression of being perfectly at home, no matter how exclusively or grand the place is.

She is the woman who never slouches or settled down, as if life is just too much for her. She gives the impression that she is alert, interested, ready to hop off for a dance tea here or a midnight show there. She is an asset, rather than a liability to a social function.

Most of all she carries her hands and arms easily too. She doesn't have to smoke all the time for fear she will have nothing to do with her hands. She has learned just to let them fall idly and easily into her lap or along the chair's arm. She knows that poise is a requisite this spring to charm.

Babies prefer red and adults prefer blue, according to the report of Dr. Ruth Staples, of the University of Nebraska.

Box-plaits

BY ANNEBELLE WORTHINGTON

Sheer woollens are tremendously smart for resort and Spring. The ribbed fabrics are especially favoured as boucle jersey and knitted woollens.

Here is a clever model with interesting bodice treatment that ends itself just perfectly to these soft flattening woollens.

The skirt displays the voguish wide box-plait effect with extreme snugness through the hips.

And incidentally, you'll like it quite as well developed of plain rough crepe silk or of printed flat crepe silk.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vane

POPPING THE QUESTION ALWAYS AN EMBARRASSING MOMENT BUT ARDENT SUITOR MUST NOT SHIRK IT

Dear Miss Vane I am deeply in love with a girl I have known for some years, and I am wondering whether she loves me too. I want to declare my love but am afraid to do so for fear she may make light of my feeling for her. How can I avoid all embarrassment in case she rejects my love? I don't want to be held up to ridicule, but feel that life will not be complete without her.

Seems to be quite much concerned with your pride than with the lady's feeling for you. If she is a nice old-fashioned girl who has bravely concealed her true feeling for you during all these years you never will find out just what she thinks about you until you've made a formal declaration of love. You can't guess and she is apparently too shy to tell you.

Unless she's a pretty hard-boiled specimen, there is no earthly reason why she should ridicule you for admitting your love for her. Certainly if she has the had taste to make light of a proposal of marriage, in the way you fear, then your life would be quite complete without her.

Stop worrying about how you're going to appear and find out something about her state of mind. Maybe she's tired of waiting for you to pop the question and has consequently defended herself from being hurt with a faint assumption of indifference. You certainly can't begin to understand until you've demanded the truth. So never mind the embarrassment of the situation. Most young men are embarrassed at a time like this and you must just face the music the way every other man has had to face it from time immemorial!

BROKEN-HEARTED Somehow or other you've managed to destroy X's trust in you and unless that can be regained, no amount of coaxing or pleading on your part will bring your hero back to you. Evidently you tried his patience too long, so that his love has worn thin and even though he cherishes the memory of how much you meant to him, he is no longer willing to trust his happiness to your tender mercies. You can't do anything at the moment to straighten out the affair. The decision now rests with the man you love. Either he will find it in his heart to forgive you and to wait for you back so dreadfully that other considerations count for nothing with him—or he will learn to do so without you. You can't do a thing to help yourself or him.

By all means go on seeing other friends and make the best of life as it comes along. You won't help the situation by brooding interminably upon this matter. Don't dream of flinging yourself into a new romance. That would make two new kinds of unhappiness which would be hard on you and unfair to yourself.

Try to accept the situation as philosophically as possible and turn this hard lesson to good account. As an experience it should be valuable in teaching you how to play absolutely fair and square even in the game called love.

E R Sorry but you have evidently made a mistake in columns. Your inquiry should be addressed to the beauty column not to mine. Have sent it on to the proper department.

YOUNGER CONDUCTS TEACHERS' MEETINGS

Frank Younger, principal of McKinley Junior high school, conducted the grade school teachers' meetings at Lincoln school this week. Teachers of the first, second, third, fourth and fifth grades met Monday to discuss factors in building a reading program in the schools.

MY NEIGHBOR Says —

If milk or water is spilled on the dining table cloth, place a piece of white blotting paper over it. This will absorb the moisture almost immediately.

The oven temperature must always be uniform when baking cakes. Opening and closing the oven door changes the temperature.

Grated lemon and orange peel may be easily removed from a grater if a clean vegetable brush is used.

To mark hemlines or dark material, use a thin slice of hard white soap. It will make a neat line which can be later removed by rubbing between the hands.

STUDENT TALKS AT ROTARY MEETING

Address by Allen Michie
Features Washington Anniversary Program

Menasha—What Washington would do if he could return to cope with present day foreign problems was the subject of talk by Allen Michie, Menasha high school student at a meeting of the Rotary club in Hotel Menasha Wednesday noon.

Quoting Washington's warnings about foreign entanglements, Michie pointed to the involved state of affairs existing at present as an indication of the first president's farsightedness. Although the first Americans heeded Washington's suggestions, present day diplomats have apparently forgotten this advice. The first president also advocated adequate military strength and probably would not have considered the present force of 137,000 men sufficient, Michie stated.

The talk featured the club's Washington bi-centennial program, arranged under the direction of W. E. Held.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Razin' to Go

If you feel sour and sick and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you feel sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mass movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for Liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red ink label. Regd. U. S. Pat. 2,261,261. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

FARM INSTITUTE OPENS AT NEENAH

Neenah—A two-day farmer's institute opened at the Neenah city hall auditorium at 10:30 Thursday. A similar two-day program was just completed at the Winchester hall. O. F. Cuff, Winnebago-co agricultural agent, who sponsored the meeting, is ill and unable to attend the meeting.

The opening address was given by Roy McDonald of Menominee, who discussed "Meeting the Low Prices of Dairy Products." The other talk was by C. J. Chapman of Madison, who spoke on "Care and Use of Farm Manures." The afternoon discussion was on "Commercial Fertilizer Upon Dairy Farms" and "Emergence Hay and Pasture Crops" by Mr. Chapman and Mr. McDonald respectively.

Friday morning's program included an address by Mr. McDonald on "Economic Control of Weeds" and another by C. L. Kuehner of Madison, on "Small Fruit Management." In the afternoon, addresses will be on "Feed and Care of Baby Chicks" by Mr. McDonald and "Farm Orchard for Fruit and Profit" by Mr. Kuehner.

8 TEAMS ELIMINATED

Neenah—Eight teams were eliminated in the first round of play Wednesday afternoon in the high school basketball tournament in which the teams have adopted names of various colleges. The tournament started with 16 teams, and as soon as a team is defeated it is out of the running. In the first round Wisconsin defeated Purdue; Illinois defeated Michigan; North-western defeated Indiana and Ohio defeated Minnesota in the junior league, while Notre Dame defeated California; Harvard defeated Yale; Columbia defeated Pennsylvania and Dartmouth defeated Princeton in the senior league.

In the second round on Friday, Wisconsin will play Illinois and Northwestern will play Ohio in the junior league and Notre Dame will play Harvard and Columbia will play Dartmouth in the senior league.

EXIT REGULATION

Washington—Regulations covering exits of aircraft, issued by the Department of Commerce, now provide that for planes with a seating capacity of three or less persons, only one door is necessary. For craft with capacity of from 3 to 15, an emergency exit in addition to the main door is essential. For more than 15 passengers, it is required that an emergency exit be provided for every additional 7 passengers.

PAINTERS AT DINNER

Neenah—Forty master painters of Oshkosh, Neenah, Menasha and Appleton, were guests Tuesday evening of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company at a dinner at Hotel Raiff at Oshkosh. A "talkie" version of the latest processes in paint and glass manufacture was shown.

ERADICATE SNIPERS

Japanese patrols within Hongkew were continuing their attempts to eradicate the snipers, they said, but were experiencing great difficulty. Five blocks of Japanese property in the sector also were damaged by Chinese they said.

Today's battle began after a threat of a Chinese offensive intended to block the landing of additional troops from Japan. In the face of the threat of having their reinforcements cut off, the Japanese gathered their forces for the most powerful attack of which they were capable. The air armada which they sent out today was the largest used thus far.

weaken so they might occupy them as soon as the demolition of the Chinese first line was completed.

The southern front lines leading toward Shanghai were quiet. The Japanese had moved all artillery, machine guns and infantry from the area east of Kiangwan to support the attack on the north.

CARRY OUT DEAD

As the battle raged, large numbers of Japanese dead and wounded were brought out of the front lines but it was stated that most of them would not be picked up until the engagement was ended.

United States officials in the international settlement said they would announce a plan by which all Americans in the whole settlement area could be concentrated quickly for evacuation in case of an emergency. Americans in Hongkew, chief target for the Chinese artillery, were warned a few days ago to evacuate that section and most of them complied. In announcing their preparations today, the United States officials said they did not consider the danger greatly increased yet, but they thought it best to have their plans made before an emergency arose.

Japanese consular officials said Chinese sniping activities continued within the battle areas to take an additional Japanese military toll. Eight Japanese civilians have been killed, they said, and 33 wounded in the Hongkew section of the settlement since the outbreak of fighting last Saturday. Two of the wounded were women, they said.

U. S. Unable To Produce Silk After Many Attempts

Washington, D. C.—Japan, leading raw silk producer of the world, need never fear that the United States, its largest customer, will turn to home production of raw silk on its farms and cut off its imports.

Countless experiments have been conducted in silkworm culture in the United States, but, with exception of those carried on by the U. S. Department of Agriculture here, they have not proven practical.

According to government authorities, the silkworm is native to Japan, China and a few other countries in the east. France has been the only western country in which silkworms have been raised on a profitable scale.

In the past few years China has been concentrating on silkworm culture, and it has spread on a wide and more efficient scale in that country. It is said that an underlying cause of the present trouble between China and Japan is due to the competition Chinese silk is giving that of Japan in foreign markets.

Introduces Silk

The first attempt to introduce silkworm culture in America was made by Cortez, conqueror of Mexico, in 1522. He tried to establish the silk industry there, but after a good start, it faded away.

Early in the 17th century, the raising of silkworms and growing of mulberry trees, the leaves of which supply the worms' food, was attempted in Virginia.

In 1837 a silk-growing boom sprang up and farmers in several sections of the country took up this industry as a sideline. Mulberry slips sold for almost their weight in gold. But a serious blight destroyed most of the trees in the country and the enterprise was given up.

Too Expensive for U. S.

Since then attempts have been made in California, Kansas and Utah, but they have been abandoned because it has been found Japan can produce silk and ship it to the United States cheaper than it can be grown in this country.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture in Japan is a home industry. Every home in the lower classes has a few shelves in which the worms are kept. These are fed regularly with chopped mulberry leaves. When time for them to change into the pupa stage comes, they spin a silken cocoon around themselves and from this the silk is taken.

By making silk culture a home enterprise, Japan is able to produce raw silk at a much lower cost than in the United States, where few farmers have the time to devote to silk raising, except as a sideline.

The Americans were replaced in the most dangerous position within the settlement lines by the Scottish Argyll and Sutherland "Ladies from Hell." The bare-legged, pink-kneed and kilted Britishers went in for their share of the uncertainties along the Shanghai line.

The Americans had earned their rest. The boys had come up only recently from Manila where tropical breezes blow unceasingly. Since their occupation of the danger zone they have been breathing biting winds within their sandbag barricades. Their position was most dangerous because they had the Chinese facing them and the Japanese on their right. As a result they saw plenty of action from within their lines.

Many times machine gun bullets rained over their sector and shells from the Chinese artillery west of Shanghai often ripped overhead, headed for the Japanese positions in Hongkew park.

INHALING STEAM IS PRESCRIBED TO HALT SYMPTOMS OF CROUP

Ailment Is Common but Not Dangerous if Properly Cared for

Madison — Croup is one of the most distressing disturbances to the parents at this time of the year, and one of the most frightening to children. Inhaling warm steam will help relieve the symptoms, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin advised mothers in a special bulletin issued today. Croup is now prevalent in the state, the bulletin declares.

"Although a severe attack of complicated croup is a very exciting experience for every one concerned, with proper care the life of the child is practically never endangered," continues the bulletin. "Unfortunately, the symptoms of catarrhal or spasmodic croup are quite similar to those of laryngeal diphtheria, a disease having a high mortality, and consequently, it is most important that an early differentiation between the two diseases be made."

"Spasmodic croup, as its name implies, is a disease in which the outstanding nature is spasm of the muscles of the larynx, and attendant interference with the free passage of air through that organ. Ordinarily the spasmodic condition is caused by inflammation of the larynx as part of a 'cold.' In many instances, however, the child may seem to be perfectly well, or only have the slightest evidences of a 'cold' upon going to bed, and yet will develop an attack of croup later in the night. On the other hand, catarrhal laryngitis alone does not necessarily lead to croup. Some children never have croup even in the presence of very severe catarrhal laryngitis. Others become croupy as the result of the slightest 'cold.' This difference in susceptibility to croup in different children evidently indicates an individual predisposition to the disorder. Age seems to exert considerable influence on its development in that the disease is most frequent between the ages of two and four years. Such factors as enlarged and diseased tonsils and adenoids and nervous disposition also seem to act as predisposing causes. Acute indigestion at times may bring on an attack in susceptible children."

"Treatment of an attack of croup consists in instituting measure which will relax spasm and relieve congestion. After relief from the acute symptoms has been achieved, the use of steam inhalations helps to insure permanent relief for the balance of the night."

"Inasmuch as repeated attacks of croup are apt to occur on the succeeding nights, treatment directed at the exciting cause, which is usually a 'cold,' should be persisted in for several days or until complete recovery has come about."

INQUEST ORDERED IN GIRL'S DEATH

Officials to Probe Fatal Poisoning of Miss Richanda
Doeherty

Chilton — (P) — Calumet-co authorities today ordered an inquest into the death of Miss Richanda Doeherty, 13, who died under strange circumstances at her home in Stockbridge near here.

Coroner John Minahan and District Attorney Dick announced a post mortem would be held this afternoon and an inquest would follow either tonight or tomorrow.

The girl died early yesterday, a few hours after a man visited her at the home of her parents. Her mother told officers the girl was found violently ill in a bedroom after the man had gone.

Mrs. Doeherty said she went to the home of a neighbor to get milk for her daughter and later called the village druggist. The druggist told the prosecutor he found the girl in a coma and noted what appeared to be burns on her lips.

A physician was called from Hilbert, Wis., but the girl died without regaining consciousness. The druggist, the district attorney said, admitted he sold her a bottle of poison about a week ago. No trace of the bottle has been found.

IRON METEORITE GIVEN TO GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM

Madison — (P) — An iron meteorite, weighing over eight pounds of Wisconsin by Dr. Andrew Leith of the department. Dr. Leith obtained the meteorite while touring the western copper deposits and it was picked up near Meteor Crater, 40 miles from Flagstaff, Ariz.

The crater, a mile wide and 600 feet deep is ranked as one of the natural wonders of the world. It is believed to have been formed by the impact of a tremendous meteor about 50,000 years ago.

ONLY $150,000 SPENT FOR REMOVAL OF SNOW

Madison — (P) — Because of sparse snow falls this season, the state of Wisconsin has spent only $150,000 of a total appropriation of $500,000 for snow removal, William Hoenig, state maintenance engineer, said today. The figure represents the expenditure for October, November, December and for 20 counties during January. The $500,000 is appropriated from the state four cent gas tax.

WARN AGAINST HIGH PRESSURE SALESMEN WHO USE TELEPHONE

Public Service Commission Receives Many Complaints
in State

Madison — A warning against the high pressure securities salesman who resorts to the long-distance telephone to solicit purchases, was issued today by the Public Service Commission of the State. The Commission has had numerous complaints regarding out-of-state salesmen who work via the long distance phone route.

The Commissioners stated that inasmuch as transactions of this nature are largely interstate in character there is no regulation by any public agency. Prosecution is made practically impossible, of salesmen whose transactions are "shady" for the reason that the Illinois law regulating salesmen was recently declared unconstitutional.

The companies referred to by the Commission publish "tipster" sheets which are sent to names of persons appearing on mailing lists procured by the company.

A return card is usually sent to such people and if they return the card to the sender, the tipster sheet is sent to them regularly. After they have received the tipster sheet for a time, they are "favored" with telegrams and long-distance telephone calls—and the "gyp" is on.

The Commission points out that these companies are not licensed to do business in Wisconsin, and that prospective purchasers would do well to communicate with the securities division of the Public Service Commission before taking final action.

ISSUE WARRANT FOR DR. WILSON'S ARREST

Portland, Ore. — (P) — Dr. Clarence True Wilson general secretary of the Methodist Episcopal board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, was charged with reckless driving in a warrant issued by Deputy City Attorney James A. Bain, upon company of L. F. Welch of Portland.

The warrant alleged an automobile driven by Dr. Wilson here last Sunday morning struck one driven by Welch and that Dr. Wilson was driving at an excessive rate of speed before the accident and failed to stop within a block.

Police said Dr. Wilson failed to report the accident as required by law.

Dr. Wilson who was visiting a daughter here, has since left for California and will not return to Portland for several months, Bain said. The warrant for his arrest will await service pending his return.

GREENWOOD MAN TO HEAD CHEESE GROUP

Election of Officers of National Federation Takes Place at Madison

Madison — (P) — F. W. Huntzicker, Greenwood, Wis., has been elected president of the National Cheese
Producers federation to succeed Gus Brickbauer, Elkhart Lake, but the directors are still undecided who will become general manager to take the place of F. A. Cornelia, resigned.

The directors held an all day session here Tuesday, excluding press representatives, and adjourned late in the afternoon without announcing the action taken.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss a successor to Cornelia and to arrange means for putting into effect the seven point program inaugurated by members at the recent annual meeting at Plymouth. What was done about the program could not be learned. Members submitted it with the idea of getting the federation back on a sound credit and business basis and to prevent any further overpayments to patrons resulting from fluctuating prices.

Brickbauer, who retires as president after having served in that position for several years remains on the board of directors.

William H. Hutter, Spring Green, was reelected vice president and R.
B. Melvin, Plymouth, was reelected secretary and treasurer.

Seek Oldest Inhabitant of

Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press

Washington — (CPA) — The never ending search for the oldest inhabitant of the North American continent started off on a new trial today with the departure of Frank M.
Setzler, archaeologist of the Smithsonian Institution, for the regions of the basket makers.

The trail leads to the black caverns of western Texas. Here last summer Mr. Setzler found traces of a civilization which represented the earliest type of human occupation of this continent yet discovered—the basket makers. No sooner had he announced his find than another archaeologist, Edgar B. Howard, attached to the Pennsylvania Museum of Philadelphia, informed the Smithsonian Institution that he believed he had found an even earlier trace of human life in North America. Mr.
Howard claimed he had evidence pointing to the existence of traces

Lawrence Cagers Play Last Home Game With Coe Saturday

TEAMS TIED FOR SECOND PLACE IN MIDWEST LOOP

Sports Program Showing Gym Departments Also Is Being Planned

Sports fans who visit Lawrence gym Saturday evening when the Vikings clash with Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Ia., in a game that may determine second place in the Midwest conference will have a chance to see all branches of Alexander gym in operation, according to Athletic Director Arthur C. Denney.

The evening's program will begin at 7 o'clock when handball and squash racket games will be played in the various courts and which fans can watch from the balcony. At 7:30 there will be a diving exhibition in the pool.

Basketball fans in the meantime will be upstairs watching the Lawrence reserve squad battle the Appleton Bears of the Y. M. C. A. league. The Bears are one of the class amateur clubs in Appleton and will give the reserves an evening's battle that won't be forgotten.

The Lawrence Coe basketball game will be the last appearance locally of the 1932 Viking squad. Two games remain on the schedule but all will be played on foreign courts, one at Beloit and one at Waukesha with Carroll.

Coach Denney's proteges have been showing very well since the Illinois trip last weekend and are confident of taking Coe over the hump. The scores the boys are having they've hit their stride. Big Bill Colbert is the big gun in the scoring attack and if he continues clicking the netting chances are excellent for a Lawrence win.

The Vikes squad again in intact excepting Sid Felts, gangling center, who is laid up with a cold. Hall and Foot both have returned to the squad and are taking their places regularly.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS ... By Laufer

THEY ALL LAUGHED WHEN EARL AVERILL strode to the plate and cracked out this particular home run. It was about a year ago when the Snohomish Slugger was in the midst of a homer streak. A delegation of school kids from a suburban town were guests of the Cleveland Baseball Club. When Averill came to the plate they presented their hero with a toy bat that must have cost all of 25 cents. It was adorned with a nobby pink ribbon. Averill discarded his favorite club and faced the pitcher with the gift stick. Manager Peckinpah rushed from the dugout to deter Averill from his foolhardy idea, but before he could call time the pitcher was in his windup. "Crack!"—and the ball went sailing over the right field barrier—a home run in a big league game with a two-bit kid bat!

Joe Boley Will Stay With Connie Mack's Champions

BY JOHN B. FOSTER Copyright, 1932

NEW YORK.—(CPA)—The Athletics have decided they will retain Joe Boley for 1932. So it is now impossible to proceed with one of the most interesting experiments promised for the coming season.

The Athletics a short time ago announced the transfer of Boley to Cleveland. The experienced shortstop might make that Cleveland team good more than one old baseball head thought.

Cleveland has labored to get a shortstop since Roger Peckinpah became manager of the team and in its time Cleveland has had some of the great shortstops of baseball. Glascock was one of them. There is no shortage of the present day and any better than Glascock and most of them are not as good. He roved

THE United Cigar Store basketball team evened a lot of matters with the Appleton Pure Milk company team last night when it downed the Milks 25 and 21 and ousted the five from first place in standings. The Bears now are first place holders, the Milks are second and the Cigars third.

In the other game last night the Fox River Paper company team rallied in the second half to overcome a lead and beat the Coated Paper team, 20 and 18.

Play in the first half of the Cigar-Milk game was even, both teams getting four buckets and a free throw. In the second half R. Reetz started to locate the hoop and dumped in three baskets while his mates came through with four and two gift shots. Reetz led the Cigar scoring with four goals and McCanna paced the Milks with a like number.

Coated Paper led at the half in its game with Fox River Paper company but was so unaccustomed to success, it failed in the second half. The count at the beginning of the long rest was 12 and 7 for the Coated. All the Fox River clubbers swung into action in the last half to overcome the lead and win.

STIRBLING PLANS TO STOP SCHAAF

Much Interest Being Shown in Tomorrow's Chicago Stadium Fight

Chicago.—(AP)—"Pa" Stribling has instructed his fighting son, W. L., to go out after a knockout and nothing less when he tangles with Ernie SchAAF had punching Bostonian, in their important 10 round battle at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

"My boy's future depends on the result of this match and a mere decision victory will not be satisfactory to us," the father-manager of the Georgian said. "A knockout victory would elevate W. L. to third ranking among the heavyweights, a spot that would enable him to harass Sharkey and Schmeling."

SchAAF, who will have Sharkey in his corner, has exactly the same bat (he plan mapped out—a knockout. He wound up his heavy drill yesterday in fine condition and expects to outweigh Stribling by a margin of 50 pounds at ringside, scaling around 208 to Strib's 188.

The match only a day off, the box office reported a new rush of business indicating the gate may be around $35,000.

RICONDA'S SALARY CLAIM IS ALLOWED

Chicago.—(AP)—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, today allowed the salary claim of the veteran Harry Riconda against Minnesota and granted the free agency claim of player James F. Wallace of the Youngstown club.

The salary claim of H. C. "Doc" Smith against Omaha was denied.

No Place For Old Alex On Cub Squad Hornsby Says

VALPARAISO, CAL.—(AP)—Manager Rogers Hornsby admits there is no room for the veteran Grover Cleveland Alexander on the Cubs staff this year but he is taking full advantage of Alex's baseball knowledge in drilling his rookies.

Ever since the rookie school opened, old Alex has been imparting knowledge to Cub pitching hopefuls. The veterans already on hand have picked up some pointers from the old master, too.

Los Angeles.—(AP)—With Eddie Moore in the fold, the camp followers of the New York Giants are trying to figure out just how the Giant squad of infielders will be lined up for the coming season.

The general idea is that there will only be six and that Bill Terry, Travis Jackson and Johnny Vezar are sure bets. Hughie Critz is another if his weak arm comes around and to get his Freddy Linstrom is due to get his job. That leaves Moore, Sam Leslie, a probable first base substitute, and Eddie Marshall.

Beginning With "Why?"

Why should critics of the manly art of self defense froth at the mouth because Jack Dempsey elects of his own free will to become another Bat Nelson? (Ad. Wolfcast still is in a sanatorium somewhere training for a big fight.)

Why do certain wrestlers, after slugging their opponents, look appealingly at the referee when they are themselves slugged? (One of the qualities of melodramatic perfidy is simulated cowardice.)

Why does it rain in Florida and California as soon as the ball clubs begin training, when every native son will tell you every year that such precipitation is unprecedented?

WANT DEMPSEY TO FIGHT DERBY EVE

Louisville Plans Another Match for Ex-champ; Jack Made Colonel

Louisville, Ky.—(AP)—Negotiations are underway to sign Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, as one of the principals of the annual derby eve fight card here May 6.

Dempsey went to Chicago today receiving a commission as Kentucky colonel from Gov. Ruby Laffoon at Frankfort. The fighter drew more of a gate to hear his speech yesterday before the Kentucky legislature than turned out for addresses by four Democratic presidential prospects who have spoken at Frankfort.

Promoters of Dempsey's fight here Tuesday, in which he whipped Frankie Wine, Butte, Mont., believe the former champion would draw a record crowd here derby eve. Almost 15,000 attended the Wine exhibition. His signing is understood to hinge on prospects of obtaining a suitable opponent.

TOM HICKEY TO TOUR ASSOCIATION CAMPS

Chicago.—(P)—Thomas Jefferson Hickey, veteran president of the American Association, is so enthusiastic about the approaching flag race in his baseball circuit that he is contemplating his first tour of the spring training camps in three years.

"I haven't made a tour of the spring training camps for three years, but the germ of enthusiasm over the coming race is getting me," he said. "Of course, we always have to worry about weather conditions but the race this year looks better balanced than that of 1931. We have a good club at Toledo, Kansas City and Minneapolis will be much stronger while Indianapolis, with its new park, looks like a great spot."

All the umpires have been signed for 1932 but President Hickey said they would not be announced until next week.

NEYLAND WILL REMAIN AT U. OF TENNESSEE

Knoxville, Tenn.—(P)—Major Bob Neyland, football coach at the University of Tennessee, today definitely was out of the group of prospects being considered for the vacant post at the University of Wisconsin.

Yesterday, Neyland signed his 1932 contract at the Tennessee school after a conference with the athletic council. He declined to reveal the terms of the contract.

It had been rumored strongly that Neyland was to make a trip to Wisconsin to discuss the position made vacant there by the resignation of Coach Thistlethwaite.

Legion Sponsors Pin Tourney

Green Bay.—(P)—Denied competition in a state bowling tournament because of refusal of the A. B. C. to issue a sanction, the Sullivan post, American legion, Green Bay, will sponsor a Northeastern Wisconsin meet here April 1 to 25 it was announced yesterday. Teams from Fond du Lac on the south to the northern state line will be invited to enter. An entry of 100 or more teams is sought.

WALBERG AND GROVE STILL ARE HOLDOUTS

Pitcher Merritt Cain Signs; Connie Directs Boys in Drill

Fort Myers, Fla.—(P)—Connie Mack has scored one victory in his holdout war by reaching a salary agreement with rook pitcher Merritt Cain, but has yet to pierce the armor of Rube Walberg and Lefty Grove.

Walberg and Mack had a talk at the ball park but it wasn't about money. Connie declared before he turned back to supervising the daily drill. Grove still nods to his boss when they meet but they have not yet discussed salary.

While the two pitchers went for a round of golf, Connie gave his rookie batterymen a brisk workout.

ENGLISH DRIVER SETS THREE NEW AUTO SPEED MARKS

But Sir Malcolm Campbell Is Dissatisfied and Will Try Again

DAYTONA Beach, Fla.—(AP)—Three new automobile speed records Sir Malcolm Campbell, 47-year-old Englishman, established here yesterday. He was prepared to try to better them today.

Striking down the beach at low tide yesterday in the face of none too favorable course and wind conditions, Campbell broke his own previous marks by driving the mile at 263.688 miles an hour, the kilometer at 251.340 and the kilometers at 243.569 miles an hour.

His twelve-cylinder blue bird racing car was clocked one way over a five mile distance at 244.200 miles an hour but timing traps failed to work on his second run and he was not allowed a record for that distance. Regulations require that a designated course to establish a record.

On his first run south over the 12 mile course, Campbell was clocked at 134.8 seconds over the measured mile for the astounding speed of 267.459 miles an hour. His second run was timed at 14.89 seconds for a speed of 241.773 miles an hour. The average for the runs was 14.175 seconds for a two-way speed of 253.968 miles an hour.

The new record for the mile exceeded by 8.235 miles an hour for former mark of 245.733 he established in the same car here last year. He bettered his own time over mile by 47 of a second.

Because of a strong head wind, Campbell said he was greatly dissatisfied with his trials yesterday and that if the wind subsided by low tide today he should be able to boost all his records by a wide margin. He said he might try for new records for five miles and ten kilometers.

FIRST WARD BOYS PLAN FOR SOFTBALL

Although the softball season doesn't appear "just around the corner" or anything like that, the first ward fifth grade boys are considering the outlook for a club this spring. Last year the team won every game played, one contest being a 59 and 6 win. Clifford Lutz was captain last year and will manage the team this season with Danny Ornstien captain.

LIQUIDATION IS SPEEDED UP BY BANK OFFICERS

Process Is One of Excessiveness During Last Quarter of 1931

By CHARLES F. SPEARE

Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York.—The extent to which deflation has been carried on by the banks of the country and is still progressing, is shown in the figures of the federal reserve board for the week ending Feb. 17, which supplement those currently presented in the January bulletin of the system covering changes in the loans and investments of member institutions from the end of last September through the month of January.

The picture is one of excessive liquidation of bank assets during the last quarter of 1931 and in the first month of 1932, with some slowing down in February as confidence has gradually replaced fear among bank depositors and the totals of bank failures dropped to a nominal weekly figure.

The degree to which deflation has taken place in the banks is suggested in the statement by the federal reserve board that in the final quarter of 1931 the reduction in the loans and investments of member banks was "about equal in amount to the full decline in the preceding two years and larger than the post-war liquidation which took place between Nov. 15, 1920 and March 19, 1922."

Both in degree and in the length of time covered, the current liquidation greatly exceeds that of the previous panic period and in the opinion of many has gone far beyond the requirements of the situation.

Down 10 Per Cent

From the date of the Sept. 29 bank call in 1931 to Feb. 17 this year, the loans and investments of member banks have decreased $2,376,000,000, or 10 per cent. Taking the item of loans specifically it is found that the reduction amounts to $1,500,000,000, also 10 per cent. Separating loans into those on securities and on other forms of collateral, the figures indicate that in the four and one-half months period security loans of banks were cut down $872,000,000, or 14 per cent. On the other hand, other loans, or those on "farm land and other real estate," which were $268,000,000, or 3 per cent. The total of such loans at the present time is $1,317,000,000 as against $5,474,000,000 of loans on securities. Obviously there will be little progress in whittling down this item of real estate loans, which constitutes the bulk of the "slow paper" of institutions that have become insolvent and others whose investment portfolios are now being carefully nursed.

From the composite of these figures it is apparent that the depression from last September on was distinct in character from those preceding it, in that it represented a phase of financial panic just as the previous two years had been concerned mainly with unsettlement in securities and in commodities.

Not Under Control

That it had not been controlled in January is evident from the statement in the federal reserve bulletin that in this month the reduction in the loans and investments of the member banks amounted to $550,000,000, following a cutting down of these items in the December quarter by banks in leading cities in the sum of $1,000,000,000 and an additional $1,000,000,000 by other member banks. It is equally apparent that during February the effect of both of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation support and the anticipated benefits of the new banking bill has imposed strong resistance to the influences making for deflation or liquidation so that the figures to be presented by the banks on the date of their next call at the end of March should tell quite a different story than those now given currently.

During the period that decreases in loans have been going on, the investments of the banks have also been dropping. At the end of last September these amounted to $7,316,000,000. On Feb. 17 this year they were down to $7,040,000,000.

They had increased $1,482,000,000 in the year between Oct. 1, 1930, and Sept. 30, 1931, while loans had decreased in the same period in excess of $2,500,000,000. These investments are placed under two classifications, first those representing United States government issues, of which government bonds are the largest portion and, second, domestic securities such as municipal, railroad, public service and industrial obligations and foreign securities. The official figures suggest a universal increase in investments in government securities coincident with a reduction in securities of the other types.

LIFE'S ODDITIES

By George Clark

"No I don't believe I'd have had the baby, if I didn't live near a park."

SENATE APPROVES CARDOZO NOMINATION

Washington (AP)—The expected unanimous approval to the nomination of Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo of New York as associate justice of the supreme court was given by the senate without any more than the bang of a gavel.

It took 10 seconds at the close of yesterday's session to ratify President Hoover's choice of a successor to the venerable Oliver Wendell Holmes, who retired under the weight of great age.

Justice Cardozo, is not expected to take his place on the highest bench until March 14. He has some work ahead of him on the court of appeals of his state, of which he is chief judge, and after next Monday the supreme court will recess until the March date.

In the absence of any occasion for haste the nomination is being held the customary three days before transmission to the white house, although there is no question but that the senate would have been glad to waive its rules as a tribute to the new justice, universally acclaimed a worthy follower to the distinguished humanitarian and liberal he succeeds.

JOBLESS MAKING EFFORT TO SOLVE OWN DIFFICULTIES

Build Cooperative Town in Ozarks; Expect Ranks to Swell to 2,000

Concord Springs, Ark.—Five hundred unemployed men who expect to have their ranks swelled to 2000 as soon as housing is available, have undertaken to solve their own relief problems here in an experiment without precedent in this section. They are seeking to rehabilitate themselves as self-supporting and self-respecting citizens through a community-owned and governed colony hewn out of an 8000-acre tract of cutover Arkansas timber land. Each member of the colony will be a stockholder and the worker of 10 acres of land. Their enterprise is called the Arkansas-Missouri-Oklahoma Development corporation, and their holdings are in the center of the Ozark timber region, near Fayetteville.

Concord Springs is already one of the busiest hamlets in the country. Application has been made for a postoffice, a deputy sheriff has been assigned to keep order, a town-site has been laid out and buildings are rapidly going up, and plans are being drawn for a dam to furnish water and cheap power to the new town.

A community-owned sawmill is turning out lumber to be used in fashioning the houses which will furnish living quarters for all shareholders. Already many cabins, a commissary, a barber shop, shoe shop and land office have been erected. A cannery factory is to be built as soon as vegetables are ready for canning.

An eight-hour day is being observed. "He who does not work cannot eat" is the town slogan, and it is observed literally.

Only persons with enough money to buy the necessary 10 acres of land and to buy food through the winter are admitted, but the total amount necessary is surprisingly small.

The real head of the colony, George Perrine, vice president, formerly was a big builder in Tulsa, but he had but 69 cents when he paid his colony dues and landed at Concord Springs. The movement started in Tulsa, Okla.

His drawings of the townsite, cottages, commissary and other buildings for the new town are professional enough to suit anybody. Carpenters, bricklayers, electricians, barbers, tradesmen, writers, factory hands, musicians, preachers are among the strange crew who plan to carve themselves a new destiny out of wilderness like their hardy forebears did in '49.

"Please say we are not Reds, radicals, Communists, or a Soviet or Little Russia group," he said. "We are merely American men out of work who seek to solve our own relief problems. We are not beggars and believe that a general back to the land movement might do much good for the country that has gone too far in buying paper securities. We have a plan—a 10-year plan—for our own rehabilitation."

RUMOR WERNER A S CANDIDATE FOR MAYORALTY

Nomination Papers Not Yet

London

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—An interesting angle has been introduced into the approaching city election with the rumor that there will be a fight for mayor. The new entry in the field is Jacob Werner, it is said. No papers for his candidacy have yet been circulated, however. He has served for years as member of the Waupaca board, and has been active in civic efforts. He is a member of the drug firm of Ortlieb-Werner.
All city officers will end their terms this spring and the terms of five aldermen will close. Those whose terms end include Jess Thompson, Dr. W. C. Fruehlich, and Mrs. J. Pfeiffer and Henry Stern. The latter was appointed by the board to fill the unexpired term of the late Dr. C. D. Hemmy.

"45 YEARS OF FAITHFUL SERVICE"

KAUKAUNA AIDS IN CAMPAIGN TO RELEASE FUNDS

Local Committee Prepared to Sell Government Bonds to Citizens

Kaukauna—That Kaukauna men will cooperate in the plan of President Hoover to put idle money into circulation, beginning March 7, was brought out in a report submitted to the Kaukauna Advancement association at its meeting in Hotel Kaukauna Wednesday evening by William Ashe, secretary. A 6:30 dinner preceded the meeting.

In accordance with the plan groups of workers have been appointed to take part in the campaign of the Reconstruction organization. The plan is to sell bonds, similar to the Liberty Loan bonds of 1917, to endeavor to put idle money into circulation again. The bonds will be in $50, $100, and $500 denominations, and will be negotiable on 60 days notice. All of the bonds would mature within a year, according to Mr. Ashe.

The money will be deposited in local banks until such time as used by the federal government. On March 7, the drive to sell the bonds throughout the city will be started. Karl Stansbury of the Thilmany Pulp and Paper Co. is head of the Kaukauna organization. That the state of Wisconsin is head of other states this work was pointed out by Mr. Ashe.

Ready To Function

L. J. Brenzel, president of the association, read a telegram from Frank Knox, national organizer. The Kaukauna committee is organized and is ready to function, according to Mr. Ashe.

Reports of the legion unemployment plan were submitted by Ed Haas, chairman of the group in charge. The registrations to date show 240 unemployed men and 29 women. The drive for jobs for these men and women will start at 6 o'clock Friday evening. Canvassers will seek to get each householder to guarantee a man two hours or more of work a week. This plan would secure enough hours to keep one man busy in each block, it is estimated.

That the plan was successful in nearby cities was indicated in Mr. Haas' talk. Cooperation of residents with the legion was asked by Mr. Haas. The plan will keep men in work until about the middle of June. If residents cannot guarantee any number of hours per week, they should call the legion office in the municipal building wherever they have work of any nature for the unemployed men to do, Haas suggested.

Reports On Fair

Walter P. Hagman, general chairman of committees handling arrangements for the mid-winter fair, reported that everything is in readiness. He also told the association that there is a possibility that the fair may have to be postponed or delayed because of the prevalence of influenza here.

Although there are a large number of people affected, the situation is not believed serious.

Discussion took place of methods in which local manufacturers and business men can assist in keeping two trains of the Northwestern road here in operation. The two trains in question are train No. 153 arriving at 11:30 in the morning, and train No. 114 arriving at 6:30 in the evening. O. E. Fiedler, station agent of the Northwestern here, gave a report of the train service. John Coppes, chairman of the association's committee investigating the train discontinuation, reported on the committee's findings. Cooperation of manufacturers here was promised, and in this manner the committee hopes to force the railroad company to retain the trains in question.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for entertaining the county board at the April meeting of the association. They are R. H. McCarty, J. J. Jansen, and John Coppes.

Deafness and Head Noises From Catarrh.

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, if your nostrils are clogged or if phlegm drops in your throat causing catarrh of the stomach or bowels, secure proper treatment at once. Otherwise you may lose your health, become a worn-out catarrhal wreck with our smell, taste and hearing completely gone. Sprays, salves and inhalers may bring you temporary relief, but permanent escape from this dangerous, health-sapping, disgusting disease can only come from a constitutional treatment that will expel the catarrhal poison from your system. So go to Schlitz Bros. or your druggist today for an ounce of Parmit, take this home and add to it a little sugar and a pint hot water. A tablespoonful taken four times a day will act upon the blood and mucous membrane and bring relief. Think what it will mean to breathe freely again, to hear plainly, smell, taste, and arise in the morning refreshed and strong, with clear head and throat free from phlegm. Certainly you cannot enjoy or benefit from life so long as you are afflicted with catarrh. So for your own sake give Parmit a trial—start treatment today.

Chester D. Snell, dean of the division said today. Interest, he said, is reflected in increased registration for correspondence courses and extension classes in economics and sociology and in requests for hundreds of package libraries on controversial questions of public policy.

"During the last legislative session the department of debating and public discussion worked to the limit filling requests for package libraries on such subjects as chain banking, public order, the six hour day, taxation, chain stores, control of public utilities, especially water power, reforestation, unemployment insurance and war debts," said Miss A. L. Scott, director of the department.

"A loan package library," Miss Scott explained "is a collection of the latest authoritative information from all points of view on a given subject in the form of pamphlets, newspaper and magazine clippings, and typewritten excerpts from books, selected to meet a specific need."

To give the public an opportunity to get information on and discuss these public questions the department last year sponsored, in cooperation with the high school foreign association, a state-wide debate on the subject, "Resolved, that chain stores are detrimental to the best interest of the American Life," and this year is promoting a series of debates on compulsory unemployment insurance."

ALASKAN AIR LINES HAVE TOUGH JOB

Anchorage, Alaska — The airplane is probably more valued in Alaska than in any other section of the American continent. Because of the fastness of the interior, planes have proven a speedy and comparatively cheap method of transportation. About 90 per cent of those who travel 200 miles or more in Alaska use planes.

A pilot must be somewhat of a genius to start an airplane engine on a flight into the interior, where the temperature reaches from 20 to 40 below zero. Here's the system he uses:

At all times a canvas "tent" covers the engine of the plane. Into this the pilot enters and ignites a gasoline stove to warm up the engine

Meanwhile the engine oil, which was drained the minute the plane came to a stop, is heated on another stove. The oil is then put into the engine and it is started.

Sometimes the engine fails to start before the oil gets cold. In this case the entire warming up process has to be done over.

Spicy Stories Of Screen Stars Recorded By Mike

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Hollywood—(CPA)—Hollywood is going around wide-eyed trying to remember what it said that day when—because Hollywood has just been reminded of something else about the microphone Mike hears a conversation on a far corner of the movie set even when a scene is not being filmed. What's worse, Mike reports every word to the men in the sound booth.

A considerable portion of Hollywood has taken it for granted that when the sound track went working, the microphone was working either. And a considerable portion of those who knew that between scenes the sound booth picked up ordinary conversational tones had gradually forgotten this rather important fact.

Everybody become aware of it, however, when the news leaked out about a little incident on the Paramount lot. The director was rehearsing Lili Damita, Cary Grant and Thekla Todd just before shooting a scene. The cameras of course were not turning, the sound track was cut off and conversation was permitted. Roland Young, Charlie Ruggles and George Marion, Jr., the writer, were talking together on the edge of the set.

Later when the scene had been rehearsed and duly recorded by the camera, one of the men in the sound booth left his glass enclosure to hunt up Charlie Ruggles. "What was the last part of that story you were telling Young and Marion?"

Was the last part of that story you were telling Young and Marion?"

about the lights going out in the Paris subway. Something went wrong with the sound system just as you got to the point and we lost it."

Ruggles laughed when he told of this incident but Hollywood at large isn't laughing any too heartily. Probably nowhere in the world does more gossip fly around thicker and faster than in the little interludes on the set between the filming of scenes. That's when you tell your best friend what you really think of your current husband, your current wife, the acting of the star in the current picture and the mental ity of the current director. Fortunately during these intervals the sound track records nothing but Hollywood has been brought up with a jerk against the knowledge, imparted afresh, that the sound mixers overhear everything.

And if they happened to tell, they sure could mix up plenty.

"I've been CHASING YOU 12 miles....

to tell You You've Lost Your Oil"

Two cars raced along the highway east of Abilene, Texas. The second driver finally overtook the leader and signaled to stop.

"I've been chasing you twelve miles to tell you you've lost your oil," he called to J. W. Bell. Mr. Bell found that a rock in the road had knocked a hole in the crankcase, allowing the Conoco Germ Processed Oil to drain out.

But examination of the motor showed no damage done. The "Hidden Quart" had protected the motor!

Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers the extra protection of the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away. Only Germ Processed Oil actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces. You need that extra protection during the starting period, when almost half your motor wear occurs. Oils not Germ Processed drain away, leaving parts unprotected. Germ Processed Oil stays on the job to cut down starting wear, giving your motor longer life, with fewer repair bills. It is the safest, surest lubrication you can buy.

Change to Germ Processed Oil now at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

We neither encourage "dry crankcase" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, tell of this and hundreds of other runs with empty crankcases but without damage.

BOY CRAZY

by GRACE PERKINS

Chapter 13
LAUGHINGSTOCK OF THE TOWN

Haven't you heard from him?" Hope asked.

"No."

"Then he's hurt! Something's happened," Papa Ross thought quickly. "No, he's perfectly whole and sound," he lied gruffly. "His father has talked to me on the phone."

"What did Hickey say?"

Papa Ross cleared his throat, and sought in his pocket for a cigarette.

"Hickey, as you call him, tried to be very placating at first," Papa Ross told her quietly. "But when he found out—"

"Yes? Yes? What, Daddy?"

"Really, Hope, I hate to tell you. I knew about them all along. I'm a better judge of people than you are, child. I was right in the first place—"

"Tell me!" stamped Hope stormily. "When he found out what?"

"When he learned that both your mother and I intended to cut you off entirely, your friend Hickey had a rather different tune to sing."

Hope stared at him. Brushed her hand against her eyes and stared again. For one breath moment came a stinging memory.

Dickey asked her to sign a pledge, that turned out to be her wedding license. . . . Dickey drawing as he asked her to sign, "Sign it, crickets, will you, so I can sue you for breach of promise if you don't make good." "I hope drew in her breath sharply and shook her thought from her, remembering it was a joke—a loving joke. . . . She flung back her head and looked calmly into her father's eyes.

"I don't believe it," she mumbled. "No, it isn't true. Hickey has offered to give us an allowance, set up in Harbourn."

"Talk—all talk!" snapped Mr. Ross, flicking his match out the window. "Windbag. Just putting on a face! When it came to a show-down, he was perfectly willing to listen to reason. The minute he heard I would disinherit and disown you."

"You would do that to me?"

Her blank disbelief was punishment enough to Papa Ross for the sins he was committing.

"Yes, daughter. I would. Rather than see you run your life."

Two blue eyes studied him narrowly, and then went the yellow head with a defiant toss.

"I wouldn't care! I still want Dickey!"

"I'm sorry to see you like that, Hope. It cuts me deeply that the boy got such a hold on you. Even if it is only in my imagination—"

"It isn't my imagination. I love him!"

"Don't talk utter nonsense! Cracker-baiter! love! Puppy love! Dicks!" The mere discovery at fourteen that you have emotions! Good God Hope, use your head! Does it mean nothing to you that he'd been drinking? That he's laid Rusty Crandall up with a broken cardium? That instead of being able to talk to me like a man, he's thrown me over and sprained my arm in an effort to show me my word meant nothing?"

"He didn't mean to hurt you. He was probably trying to get to me. You shouldn't have separated us like that! Why wouldn't you listen to us?"

Papa Ross treated her to the kind of foggy superior stare he often used at directors' meetings.

"Oh, I'm sorry you're hurt," she mumbled thickly, but—"

"Certainly you're sorry," Papa Ross seized on the phrase. "The boy is sorry too. That doesn't make my arm hurt any the less. Nor does any of it make the plan in my heart less acute. You know I've loved you, Hope."

Hope reddened and turned with a restless shrug toward the window.

"I know you've loved me," she agreed thickly. "You know I've loved you, Dad. But you don't seem to think I have sense enough to love anyone else. Well, you're wrong. I know what I'm talking about. I'm married to Dickey, and I love him, and I'll go to him the moment he comes. And he will come!"

She turned, as soon as she had conquered the desire to weep.

"Why are you looking at me like that?" she asked. "What are you waiting for? What did you mean—there is no Dickey?"

"I explained it to you."

"You meant because of the money? Is that it? You think because Hickey backed water when he heard I wasn't to have any inheritance that Dickey will desert me too? Well, you're fit for an asylum!"

Papa Ross crossed his knee and pinched out the crease of his dark gray trousers.

"I'm afraid," his voice was thin as a wire. "I will be fit for an asylum before you get through with your nonsense. Now look here, Hope, I'm trying to be very patient with you. You're going to find yourself the laughing stock of the town. And so is your family. Every one of us is going to feel cheap over this whole affair. I shall try to keep things as quiet as I can. But the long and short of it is, that your bull-headed half-baked hero has already deserted you."

"What do you mean? Why don't you tell me what he said?"

"I told you I haven't talked with Dickey," Papa Ross stuck to his lie. "I don't know what he said. Certainly he hasn't been man enough to come to me or get in touch with me, or attempt to see you. Since the moment he brought you home there hasn't been a murmur out of that young man. If that doesn't chalk up as a cad to you, then I don't know what you're made of."

"You're wrong, Dad. Dickey isn't like that!"

"Well, he and his father have skipped town very neatly. They're—gone!"

"Gone....?"

"They're on their way to Virginia. To somebody's hunting lodge down there. I found out that much, anyway. So if you have any idea that somebody's coming to rescue you, you might as well get right overboard."

"You're crazy. You're lying to me! Trickling me! It isn't true!"

"Well, see for yourself. Go and try to phone him."

Hope regarded him for one frightful second considering his challenge. Then, without a word she marched out of her room. Walked unseeing past Goody who had obviously been caught in the act of eavesdropping. Crossed the hall, father's study and sat down by the phone.

She called Hickey's hotel apartment. Talked to Rogers, the man-servant, and listened to him explain that Mr. Dale and his son were on their way to Virginia, and that he himself was to join them as soon as he could pack a few things.

"Any message, miss?" demanded Rogers politely.

Hope tried desperately to say "no." The word wouldn't come. She hung up and buried her head in her arms on the desk.

A hand on her shoulder startled her.

"Please!" she cried, pulling her shoulder away pettishly and getting to her feet. "Please. I want to be alone."

"I want you to know," she gasped brokenly, "that there's some (ul) mistake somewhere. He wouldn't desert me like that. We'll hear from him soon, I'm sure. And I'm going to wait before I judge!"

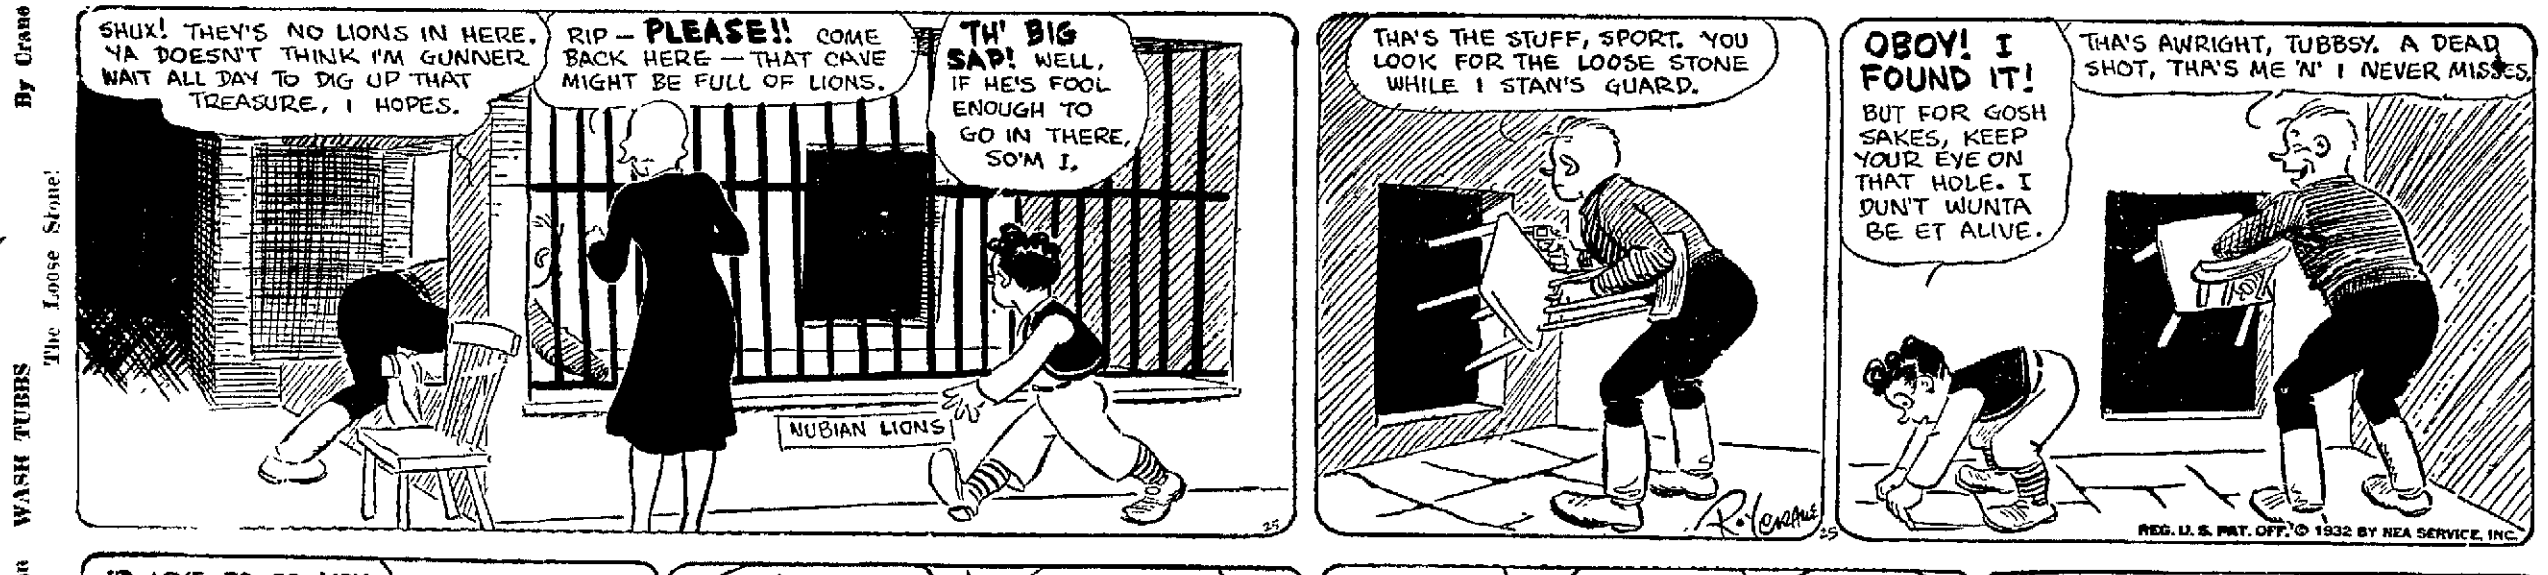

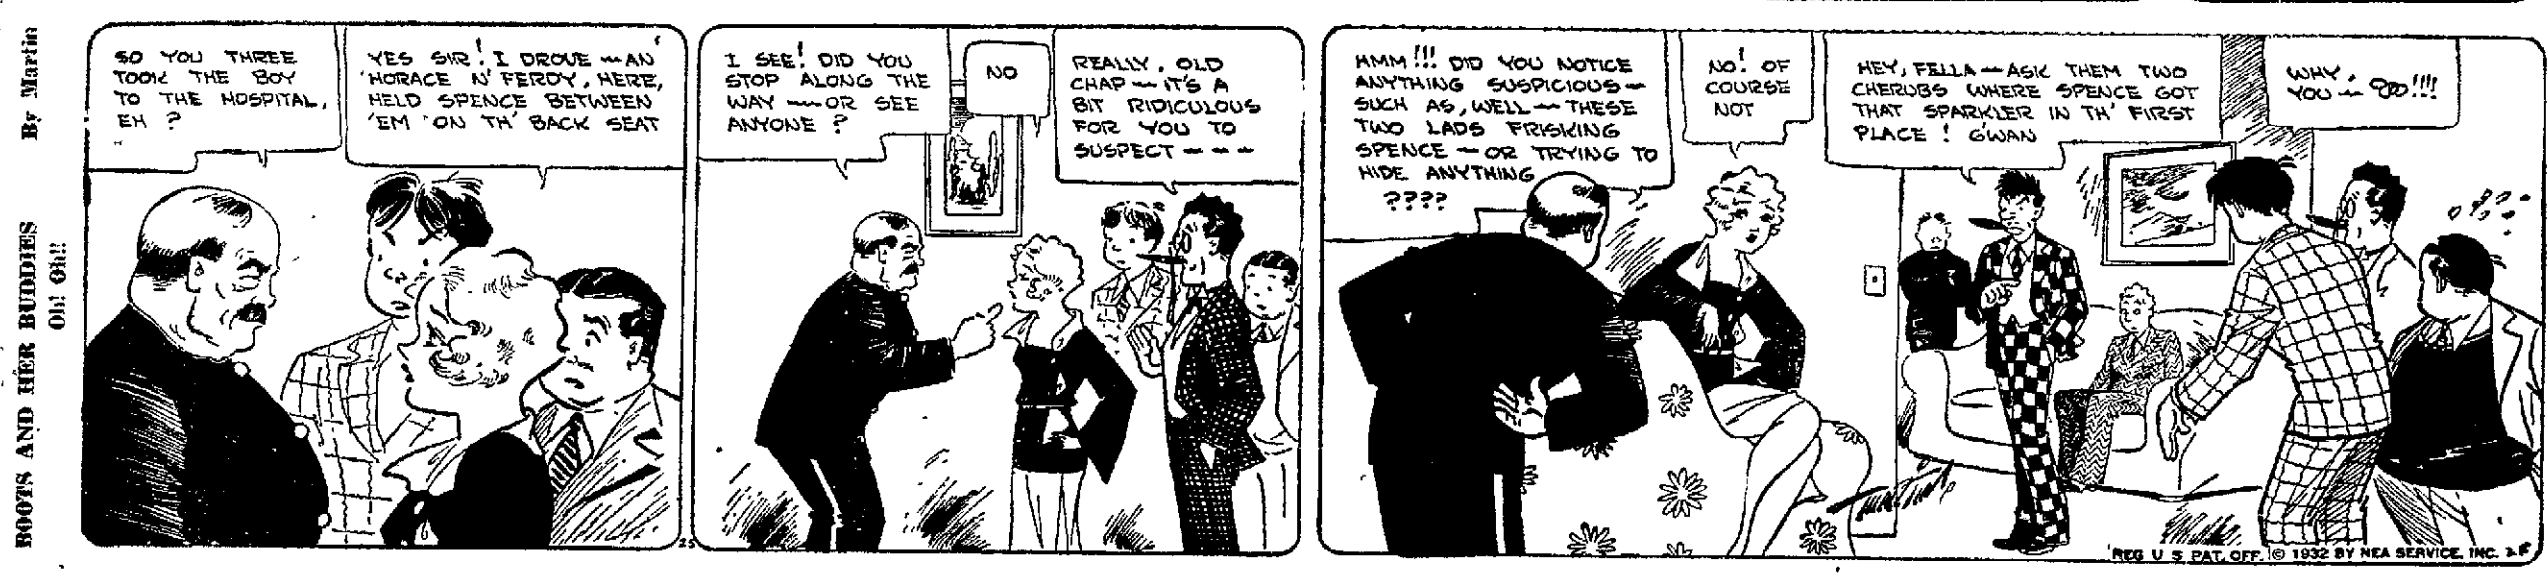

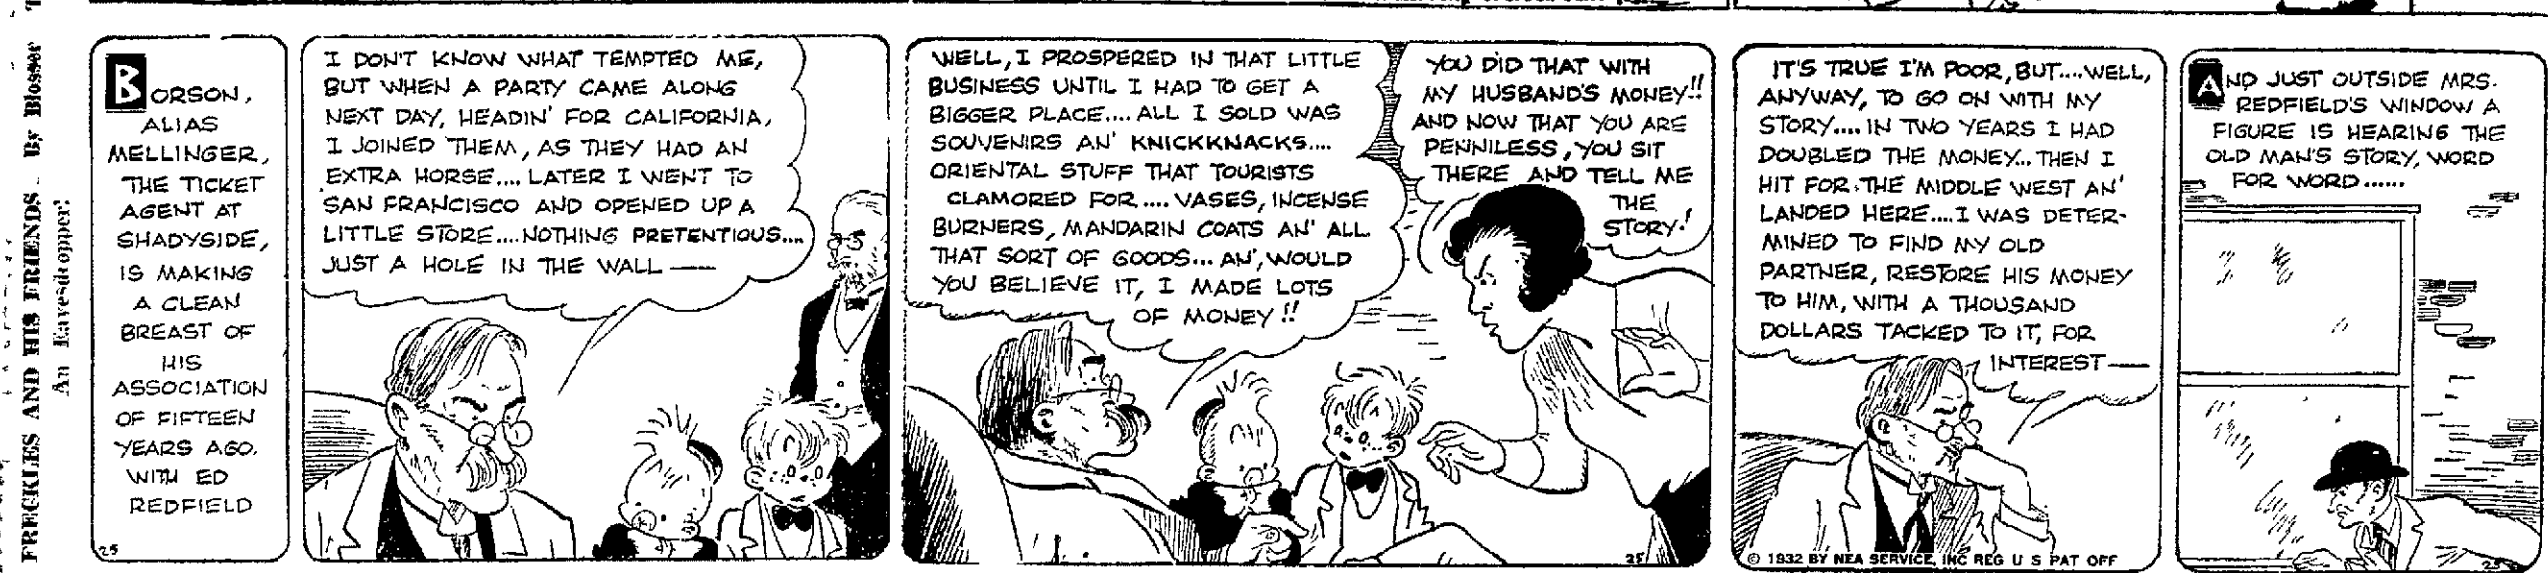

Papa Ross leaned back in his huge desk chair and looked out his casement window.

He was not sorry. But ashamed! Brutally, miserably ashamed. Ashamed that he couldn't tell the truth to Hope. Ashamed at the memory of the bleeding youth he had so violently struck down, and whom Old Man Hickey had carted directly off to the boy's maternal grandmother, rather than face further publicity by going to a hospital. Ashamed that he really didn't know the extent of Dickey's injuries. Ashamed at the treatment Hickey's man-servant had neatly dealt him over the phone as he explained both the true circumstances and the false story which Hickey had given orders to have broadcast.

But still Papa Ross was not sorry. Still he believed that he had acted only for the best—for Hope's sake. During the next three days Hope was a voluntary prisoner in her room.

(Copyright, Grace Perkins)

Mrs. Ross has a heart attack, which proves ammunition for an attempt to make Hope surrender tomorrow.

MOTIVE IS SOUGHT FOR GIRLS DEATH

Immediate Past History of Miss Richanda Doeherly Under Scrutiny

Chilton—(P)—The immediate past history of Miss Richanda Doeherly, 19, was under scrutiny by officials today as they sought a motive for her death by poison.

After an autopsy, Coroner John Minahan said circumstances pointed to suicide. So far, he said, he had not determined the motive. He ordered an inquest for Friday.

The girl was found unconscious on a bed in her Stockbridge home by her mother, a widow, Miss Doeherly had a quarrel with a man who called upon her a short time before, the mother said.

A druggist disclosed he had sold the girl poison about a week ago. District Attorney Edward Eich questioned the man but said he revealed nothing in addition to the mother's story.

An inquest will be held at 9 o'clock Friday morning at Stockbridge.

New York—Turbulence attending the accouchment of a new French government is an old story to Andre Tardieu, new premier and storm center of Tuesday's fifteen-minute battle in the chamber of deputies. In a similar excitement in 1928, he stepped into either a right or left wing fist. His glasses were shattered and his nose was smashed, but he finished his speech, with blood streaming down his face. As minister of agriculture, he faced an audience of a thousand or two whistling farmers. Whistling is the French "rasberry."

He drew a police whistle from his pocket and set up a long shrill blast. He whistled them down and made his speech. He was the first premier in more than 50 years to banish the tall coat and other official habiliments and wear a business suit. Fastidiously tailored and impeccably neat, he is more like the successful American businessman than any other French leader—up to a certain point.

He is romantic only in the amused Gallic fashion. At heart he is a realist. Fitting Santayana's characterization, he is extremely tolerant in affairs which he thinks don't amount to much. This led to doctrinaire left-wingers to think he might be with them. Several years ago he disillusioned them by appearing in a white vest, the emblem of the bourgeoisie. They thirst for his blood.

From 1904 until 1910, as political editor of "Le Temps," he was considered the most brilliant journalist in France. Thrice premier, he typifies a new French intransigence. He puts out feelers suggesting a new colonial imperialism. He authorizes all statecraft to two considerations—the status quo of the Versailles treaty and the full payment of the German debts.

Twenty-five years ago, Alice Foote MacDougal was a widow, 40 years old, with $35,000 in green coffee. Today, she re-funds and reorganizes, by a new Delaware corporation, her vast coffee, restaurant and food business, with millions in the till.

Her father was a steel rail broker, rich and socially prominent. Reared and maintained in luxury, to the day of her husband's sudden bankruptcy and death, she knew nothing of business. She spent her $35 for the rent of a room in Front-street—coffee mart—and a coffee grinder. She bought 400 pounds of coffee on credit and worked long hours grinding it. She peddled it and bought more. She brought an old typewriter from her home and set it up on a packing box. Sixteen hours a day she ground coffee and plugged the typewriter, soliciting orders. Slowly, she gathered millions.

"I can't relax now," she says. "I had to do it, but I am opposed in general to the economic competition of women with men. I am an anti-feminist."

PHONE CO. LINEMEN WASTE LITTLE LOVE FOR BIRDS, ANIMALS

Milwaukee—(P)—The busy bee, the chipmunk, the woodpecker, the cunning squirrel.

Whatever the naturalist may say about them, they are a pain in the neck for a short circuit to telephone linemen. When linemen tell their troubles, these three children of nature get plenty of abuse.

The squirrel is fond of the lead covering of telephone cables. He likes to sink his teeth into the soft metal and if he nibbles hard enough there is a little puncture into which water seeps to cause another short. The squirrel, has been pretty effectively outwitted by covering the cables, when they are wet with paint, with gritty sand.

The woodpecker does his dirty work on poles and wooden terminal boxes. Holes in terminal boxes let in rain to cause more trouble. An observant lineman noted that the woodpecker prefers to do his drilling on terminal boxes painted green. Strangely, he doesn't care for white boxes at all. So now all terminal boxes are to be white.

But there is no stopping the woodpecker when he takes a fancy to a pole. Hundreds of poles are replaced yearly because the industrious birds have weakened them.

Bees, not being electricians, on several occasions have caused shorts. In terminal boxes they have built their combs from positive to negative gadgets, with the result that a nickel's worth of honey has put long lines out of commission. Moreover, the bees resent being disturbed when the trouble man comes along to repair the damage.

dramatist, the official guest of the city, invited to America by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, and acclaimed by authors and humanitarians.

The world was on. Twenty years ago, they arrested Emma Goldman in Chicago for reading a selection from Hauptmann's "Sunken Bell." He was almost jailed himself when he published "The Weavers," in 1892—this drama, like his others, hymning the dispossessed. In 1910, he began to prevail in his battle for realism in German letters. In 1912, he received the Nobel prize. He believes that to be poor is bad enough, but to be poor and underserved is worse. He plans a drama on Judas Iscariot. "What evil powers," he asks, "made the disciple of the Saviour a traitor?"

AVIATION STRONGER
New York—After weathering two hectic years, 1930 and 1931, aviation enters the present year considerably stronger. Charles L. Lawrence, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, reports. Readjustments of the past two years and the weeding out of weak lines in aviation's chain of manufacturers and air lines, operators, has brought this about. Lawrence was reelected to the presidency of the aircraft industry's trade association at a meeting of the Board of Governors here.

March Evenings To Reveal Venus Climbing From West

BY ROBERT H. BAKER
(Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois)

Urbana, Ill. —(P)— Venus is now the evening star. It may be seen in the west in the early evening throughout March, a little higher in the sky at nightfall from night to night, until near the end of the month it will set three hours after sunset.

This brilliant starlike object is fully six times brighter than the most conspicuous star, the Dog Star, Sirius, which appears in the south. It is five times brighter than the great planet Jupiter which now is visible also, higher in the sky and farther east than Sirius.

Venus is a planet, slightly smaller than the earth and resembling the earth in many ways. It is enveloped in an extensive and cloudy atmosphere which hides its surface completely from even the largest telescope.

Whether it has continents and oceans, vegetation and animal life, astronomers so far have been unable to discover.

Photographs through red filters reveal distant features of the earth's surface through haze which renders them invisible to the eye directly. But similar photographs of Venus show only a blank disk.

The light of this planet is sunlight reflected mostly by its atmosphere. Photographs with violet filters have brought out details in this cloudy envelope.

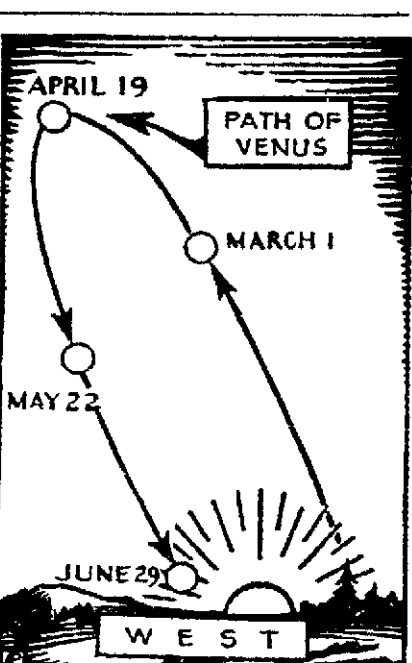

Those who observe the evening star with the telescope, even a small one, will see it as a disk; and they will notice that it exhibits phases as the moon does.

During March the phase is gibbous. By the middle of April it will be quarter, and thereafter crescent until Venus disappears from the evening sky.

Venus revolves around the sun within the earth's orbit, at the distance of 67,000,000 miles from the sun, once around in 225 days. It gains a lap on the slower moving earth once in 584 days which is therefore the interval between its appearances as evening star. Its distance from the earth now is about 30,000,000 miles.

On April 19 Venus will reach the limit of its eastward swing, about 45 degrees from the sun. After that date it will move westward between the sun and the earth, until on June 29 it will cross into the morning sky, then only 25,000,000 miles away. It will continue as morning star for the remainder of the year.

On May 22 Venus will attain its greatest brilliancy as evening star, about twice as bright as it is now. In fact, it will be bright enough during May to be easily visible in full day light to those who know where to look for it.

Toward the end of March it should be possible to catch a glimpse of Mercury as evening star also. This little planet comes to greatest eastern elongation on March 25.

For a few evenings around that date Mercury will appear as a bright star very low in the west as twilight is fading.

In addition to lightning flashing from the clouds to earth and from cloud to cloud, it sometimes flashes from the earth up to a cloud.

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York (AP)—The stock market drifted idly today, with a slow undecurrent of selling apparent, despite occasional ripples of buying. Another wide break in Auburn at the 100 mark, and some of the leaders sold up fractionally, but by early afternoon, American Telephone was off 2 points net, and issues down a point or more included U. S. Steel, General Electric, American Can, New York Central, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Dupont, Westinghouse Electric, Alaska Juneau and others. General Motors and Radio sagged fractionally under fairly active selling. Kreuger and Toll and International Nat. preferred were also under notable pressure. Union Carbide lost 1 1/2 on reduction of the dividend to $2 annually from $2.50.

In the main, the market continued to reflect tardiness of business pickup. There have been numerous rumors in brokerage circles of late over prospective bullish developments in Washington, but at least some of these rumors were set to rest when Secretary of the Treasury Mills denied that the administration was contemplating any statement on tax debts or prohibition.

One of the latest unconfirmed and official explanations for the weakness of Auburn was that the Wiley estate was planning to sell some of its holdings, and that in the meantime market sponsors of the issue had withdrawn their support.

Important banking interests in Wall Street remained moderately optimistic over the outlook for the latter part of the year, pointing to strengthening of the banking structure through the Reconstruction Corporation and the Glass-Steagall bill, and the gradual overcoming of currency hoarding, as providing a solid basis for eventual recovery.

The money market remained about stationary, and failed to forebode any reduction in the federal reserve bank's redemptory rate this week, although the impression persists that money rates are going to come down during the next few months, as indicated by the action of the bond market. That new financing is still difficult, however, was apparent in Associated Gas' announcement of an offering of medium-term bonds bearing the high interest rate of 8 per cent.

ASK COURT TO SET ASIDE INJUNCTION

Badger Firms Want Right to Manufacture Process Cheese

Chicago (AP)—The United States circuit court of appeals was asked today by the Independent Cheese Company of Monroe, Wis., and the Wisconsin Cheese Corporation to remove a preliminary injunction to prevent making certain cheeses in Madison, Wis., issued against them by Federal District Judge F. A. Geiger at the request of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese corporation.

Counsel for the Kraft-Phenix company told Judges Evans A. Evans, Will M. Sparks and Fred L. Wham that the only question before them was whether Judge Geiger abused his discretion in issuing the injunction and whether he had sufficient evidence before him that the Kraft-Phenix patents were valid and had been infringed.

The court, however, asked counsel for the Independent Cheese company to attempt to show the court that the night rule also on the validity of the patents and the correctness of Judge Geiger's decision.

Attorney Albert F. Mecklenburger, of Chicago, chief counsel for the appellates, said he would file a reply brief next week, elaborating on his point that he had covered it previously. No decision was expected for several weeks at least.

Mecklenburger argued the five patents involved were indefinite, ambiguous, lacked sufficient disclosure, represented no inventive thought, and that they had not been infringed by his clients.

Three of them, he said, had not been adjudicated in any court or case except in the Federal case before Judge Geiger himself, and the other two patents had never been adjudicated. The patent case was not appealed. He said Judge Geiger "apparently had been impressed with the stupendous manufacture and marketed commercial success the Kraft-Phenix company had achieved."

He cited cases in which courts had refused to set aside injunctions issued by a Federal court in favor of the patentee.

HOG MARKETING GAINS MOMENTUM Twelve Markets Show Increase of 40,000 During First Four Days

Chicago (AP)—Marketing of hogs gained momentum, twelve markets showing an increase of 40,000 during the first four days this week as compared with the same period last week. Favorable farm operating conditions is forcing heavy hogs to market in advance of spring work earlier than usual. The fact that packers have built up their inventories to the point was they will not put further pressure on hog prices, will make it possible for the market to absorb good sized runs for a few weeks without material price changes.

Local receipts of 35,000 carried 9,000 tagged direct to packers' unloading chutes and 5,000 were carried over unsold from the previous day. Activity developed slowly, bids made by minor operators and eastern buyers being generally steady with Wednesday's average. Choice 180 to 215 lb. Hogs were wanted at $4.10 but selected loads were priced at $4.20 and above.

Moderate cattle receipts met with a stereotyped Thursday demand from packing house buyers. In-between grades of steers receiving a 50c setback in the week have been unable to recover the loss. Best and poorest classes of cattle were about steady at prices, with some change for further strength on choice weighty beefs.

Packers received 1,400 head of lambs on through billing, but they were still in need of killing material and made early inspection of the offerings. Prime prices were quotable.

MISS FREDERICK RETURNS TO FIRST LOVE IN NEW YORK

Much Married Screen Star Is Back on Legitimate Stage

BY WARD MOREHOUSE
Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press
New York—(CFA)—Pauline Frederick is back to her old love, her first. After 18 years in the far places—California, London, Australia, Newark and West—Ninety-Seventh—this slim and dark-haired and much-married Bostonian has returned to the New York theater, or what's left of it. The town vamp in the year that the German hordes were thundering through Belgium and the Boston Braves were rolling to a national league pennant again has her name upon the Broadway household and in electric indicative of standard.

Go back to the season of Miss Frederick's defection, her desertion of midtown Manhattan for western gold and glories. Back to "Joseph and His Brethren," in which she was the wicked and eye-filling Zuleika. She had come along steadily when Leiber and Co. put on the biblical piece at the Century and gave her her big chance. She progressed from the chorus to the leading lady ranks and was going up, up, up. On nearly every managerial desk was a play containing a role that appeared to have been fashioned for her. The desk of A. H. Woods was knee deep in just such scripts and it was a palpitant Miss Frederick who rushed into A. H.'s kingly quarters and told him of her invitation to sign up with famous players.

Takes The Douch
"Sweetheart," said A. H. as he lit into a cigar (he was then smoking the most expensive to be had in all the world), there just ain't that much money. My advice is to take it." And Polly Frederick took it, putting her name on the document in the presence of Adolph Zukor in his little office down in Twenty-Eighth-st.

Drop the curtain, lower the lights, for an elapse of 18 years. The Braves did win the pennant. The Germans lost that war. Silent pictures died, talking pictures were born, and Pauline Frederick, after earning a million in pictures, is playing at the Forty-Eighth-st theater in a piece called "When the Dough Breaks." It gives her her second major role in a stage play. Her first was the Lachrymose Mme. X.

The Pauline Frederick of 1932—she was fully to A. L. Erlanger when he fired her in "The Rogers Brothers in Harvard" and she's still that to almost everybody—is a little and animated woman who, when talking for newspaper, doesn't mind mention of age, dates or husbands. She's had four of them.

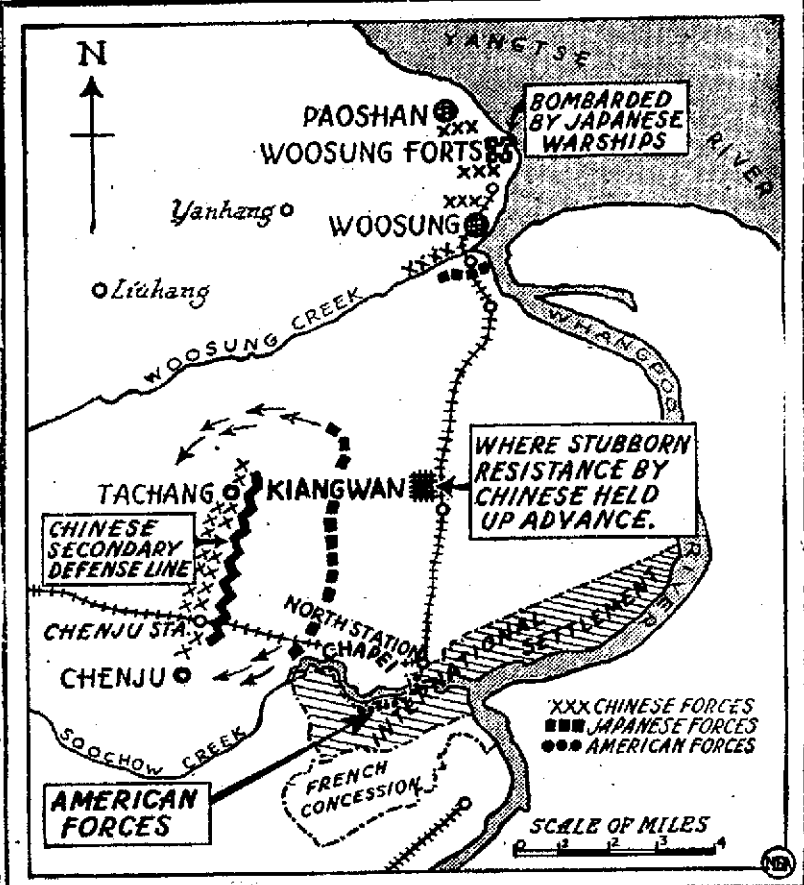

"Pictures? I made money, lots, but my heart was never in the work. I was getting about $250 or $300 on Broadway, and famous players gave me $1,000. It took my breath away. I was the man of the family—people to support. So I went. Now I'm back and I'm delighted."

All Through
The personal side? Will she marry again? Miss Frederick smiled. "Don't you think I've had enough of it? . . . Willard Mack, my second, was my only playmate husband. A great talent he has when he applies it. No, I guess after four tries I'm done with marrying. High time I should be."

The return to Broadway of Pauline Frederick isn't something that just happened. Last year she got as close as the Riviera, up at Ninety-seventh-st. She began planning such a return a decade or so ago. In 1923, or thereabouts, she appeared here briefly in "The Guilty One," and then vanished once more. Later she went to Australia, doing two plays, and still later to London for an engagement in "Madame X." Seems that Dorothy Donnelly never got around to playing that melodrama in England. If Miss Frederick has a scrap book, it probably gives a page after page account of her London first night reception. She remembers that night—she could never forget it—but it was the industrial town of Leeds, in Yorkshire, that gave her an unexpected triumph. Companies on a swing through the provinces have long found Leeds to be cold unresponsive. But Leeds forgot itself the night that Pauline Frederick went through the death agonies of Madame X. It shrieked, it shouted, it stampeded. The tumult is still pleasantly ringing in the actress's ears.

Scientists of the Smithsonian Institution have unearthed in Arizona and New Mexico ruins of American Indian tribes thought to have lived between 1300 and 500 B. C. Large "nests" were found that had been used as beds.

Chinese Hold Japs at Kiangwan

The Japanese tactics at Shanghai are made clear by this map, which shows the situation there. An enveloping swing around the Chinese left, combined with a heavy attack on the center at Kiangwan, was expected to break the line and roll it up to the south and west. Unexpectedly bitter resistance and counter-attacks at Kiangwan held up the plan, and a new attack is aimed at Chapel, at squeezing the other end of the Japanese pincers, and rolling back the Chinese right, unless Chinese attacks in this quarter anticipate the plan.

Your Birthday

"PISCES"

If February 26th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 4:30 p. m. to 5:45 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3:20 p. m.

The Planets will not exert much influence on February 26th, but will be mildly favorable for most aspects of life. A poor time for large transactions, but a safe time for minor dealings if not of a speculative nature. Evening hours should prove to be the most interesting and profitable time of the day.

The child born on this February 26th will have commonplace abilities, but a character made attractive by its sunny disposition and taking manners. Above all else it will be simple, natural, sincere and honest. It will be one of the world's givers, and not so much of a taker.

If born February 26th, nature did not bless you with a happy disposition and you have the unfortunate faculty of finding clouds where others only see sunshine and brightness. You often pick the role of martyr, where self-sacrifice are uncalled for and unappreciated. You do many unselfish things from a sense of duty and not from a willing heart; you are a disgruntled burden-carrier. You hate putting yourself under any obligations to others, and it is somewhat your own fault, if your relationships with most people are onerous; you do not know how to take things in the spirit they are given.

You are very chary of self-praise, and you never try to slide your own

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting
Thousands of sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves nor cutting remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To end Piles an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist with a rigid money-back guarantee.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external treatments or worry about an operation when Schlitz Bros. invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles, no matter how stubborn the case? NOT ALL STATES HAVE PRIMARIES

Many District and State Conventions Will Choose Delegates

Kansas City—(P)—Primaries for the expression of voters' preferences for presidential nominees or for the voters' preferences for presidential nominees or for the election of delegates to national conventions do not exist in six southwestern and mountain states. District and state conventions will choose the delegates.

From Oklahoma 22 delegates to the Democratic national convention already have been chosen. They were instructed in state convention to vote for Governor Murray as long as he has a chance. They are bound by the unit rule.

Here are the dates for conventions so far as fixed:

Feb. 27—March 18—seven—Republican district conventions in Kansas choose district delegates to the national convention.

March 8—Kansas state Republican convention elects delegates-at-large. March 24—New Mexico Republican state convention chooses all national delegates.

April 12—Missouri state Republican convention elects delegates-at-large. District conventions will choose other delegates at various times.

April 18—Colorado Republican state convention elects all national delegates.

May 17—Texas Republican state convention chooses all national delegates.

May 19—Wyoming Democrats and Republican state conventions choose all national delegates.

May 24—Texas Democratic state convention chooses all national delegates.

May 29—Colorado state Democratic convention elects all national delegates.

RISES FROM MOTORMAN TO HEAD OF COMPANY

Chicago—(P)—Thirty-one years ago Guy A. Richardson twirled the controls of a Boston elevated street car—a motorman's cap the badge of his rank.

Tuesday he was elected president of the Chicago Surface Lines—the owners say it's the largest tram system in the world.

The position was vacated by the recent death of Henry A. Blair. Richardson's promotions in the transportation world were rapid. He has served consecutively as superintendent of the Houghton-co. Michigan, Traction company, and the Seattle, Wash., Street Railway company.

During the war he laid out a transportation system for Hog Island, near Philadelphia, and eight years ago came to Chicago as vice-president and general manager of the surface lines from the Philadelphia Rapid Transit system of which he was vice-president in charge of operations.

Breaking Out Annoyed Baby Night and Day. Cuticura Healed.

"When baby was eight months old she had a breaking out of pimples all over her body which annoyed her very much both night and day. The pimples festered and scaled over. They itched and burned, causing her to lose much sleep, and she was very fretful. The trouble lasted about six weeks."

"I tried different remedies but they failed to help her. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using one box of the Ointment and three or four cakes of Cuticura Soap she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Ruth Moore, Oak Hill, Ohio, Aug. 5, 1931.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare, costs little, and saves money, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain gruel or sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe the inflamed throat membranes with surprising gain but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs and bronchial irritations. Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

failures on to another's shoulder. You feel the justice of self-suffering for your own faults and weaknesses and stoically face your misfortunes. On the other hand, you are liberal-minded in regard to the shortcomings of your fellow-beings. Affability and amiability are two traits you do not possess, and you are apt to put your worst foot forward. A greater sprinkling of humor and lightness in your nature would make life easier for you; you take all things too seriously to heart. If you be a woman and mother, you will be all in all to your children, a being absolutely at their disposal. You will lavish your love upon them.
